Uncle Billy—As They Call Him In The South

By RODNEY C. BERRY, Virginia Eta

T was back in 1873 in Normal, Illinois, following a period of considerable suspense accompanied by no little anxiety that the doctor emerged long enough to announce to the waiting members of the Phillips family, "It's a boy." No unusual event was this in the Phillips family. Seven times previously had this household celebrated like events and on five of them the doctor had made the same announcement, "It's a boy." So the arrival of this youngster was taken as a matter of fact, he was attached to the moniker William Lazelle and started on his way to maturity and usefulness in the world.

But for that event in the Phillips family would there have been such an institution as Sigma Phi Epsilon? Who knows? Destiny weaves a peculiar fabric. It may be that the fraternity would have come into existence irrespective of its founders. But it is more likely that the change of any one of a number of events would have resulted in no such an organization as we enjoy, no such relationships as cement us and no such an influence as is being cast upon the life of numbers of college students throughout the land.

William Lazelle—or, as he is otherwise known, Billy or Uncle Billy—did not long remain in Illinois. At the age of two he decided—with the aid of his parents—to migrate to New Jersey. Accordingly the Phillips family took up its residence in Newark, New Jersey, and there Billy started in earnest on the business of getting his growth. That he got it his intimate friends viewing his avoirdupois all agree. But that is getting ahead of our story.

There was nothing unusual about William's career until he was seventeen when an event of importance transpired. He got a job. The Phillips family was of modest means and its ample proportions placed a strain upon the family treasury that needed the relief of additional wage earners. So Billy set forth to work in the railroad office, filling his days with the routine of the office and at night attending night school to qualify himself for college. The next year or so was a process of saving money to pay college expenses and saving information with which to pass entrance examinations.

The year before he was ready to go to college an event happened that proved to be of significance not only to Billy but to the fraternity. The event was the seemingly unimportant occurrence of a visit to a friend attending the University of Virginia at Lexington, Virginia. While there the two, for the sake of excitement, took a trip to Richmond simply to see the city and while there found occasion to visit old Richmond College, now known as the University of Richmond. They were enchanted with the city and especially the college. There the determination was made in Billy's mind to attend Richmond College and the next fall found him as a matriculant of that institution.

It is an interesting story—those events that lead to the forming of the Saturday Night Club and its subsequent transformation into Sigma Phi Epsilon. Space will not here permit of more than mention of the fact that Billy and five friends, Jenkins, Gaw, Carter, Wallace and Wright, soon after the school session started formed the Saturday night Club. It was as a member of this club that Billy conceived the idea of building a national Greek letter fraternity and it was not a difficult matter to interest the other members. Plans were laid, fraternities were studied, a ritual was drafted and a new fraternity was ready to be launched.

Faculty approval of all fraternities upon the campus was necessary, however, and one evening with all plans perfected the members called upon a faculty committee to state their plans and secure approval of their venture. Upon the faculty committee were members of strong fraternities and the up-start organization seemed a very amusing thing to them. Their statement of plans met with banter followed by argument against the feasibility of the thing. But the members were determined. Admitting that they were financially weak and that a heavy load would be carried in getting the new organization under way they still felt confident of securing successful fraternity operation as it was known on the Richmond campus.

"What do you propose to call the fraternity?" asked the member of the faculty at whose home the conference was held. "Sigma Phi," they told him. The professor arose with great deliberation, walked to the bookcase and taking down a copy of Baird's Manual of College Fraternities showed them that there was already an old, established fraternity with that name.

The ground rocked beneath their feet. The best laid plans began crumpling. After all of their plans, their enthusiasm, their high hopes this was the crowning stroke to climax the opposition of the faculty. But only a moment intervened until one of the members in his fall through space landed upon his feet and gained his equilibrium.

"Well, that settles a vexing question for us, Doctor," he said. "We have been debating among ourselves whether to call our fraternity Sigma Phi or Sigma Phi Epsilon and this settles the question for us." This rapid shift of ground was a saving grace. Out of disaster came a ray of hope that terminated in the faculty giving its reluctant approval to the plan and a new fraternity made its appearance upon the Richmond campus.

The badges of the fraternity had already been ordered. A telegram was rushed to the jeweler requesting him to add the Greek letter Epsilon to the legend Sigma Phi already given him. This late change resulted in the badges carrying the Epsilon at the bottom of the badge below the cross bones. Twenty-one badges of this design were made before the change was made to the present official design. One of the prized possessions among Billy's fraternity relics is his original badge, twice the size of our standard badge and lacking the skillful execution of the modern jeweler. But clumsy and curious as it is, money could not buy it. Around that bit of metal and those jewels have centered the hopes, aspirations and the labors of twenty odd years. Into its glorification have gone those years of his life that hold the most cherished place in memory's shrine. It may be only a curio, a memento, to other members but to Billy Phillips it is the symbol of a decision to consecrate his life to the cause of budding manhood and he would part neither with the recollection of those years nor the visible token of their meager beginning.

Few members of the fraternity will ever truly appreciate all of the early struggles and obstacles our founders encountered in the beginning. Money was scarce, as it always has been. Many times Billy started out on a trip to visit colleges and establish new chapters with just about enough money to reach his destination. Locals would present themselves that must be inspected. There were few funds for carfare and sometimes Billy faced the alternative of installing a chapter and collecting charter fees or walking back to Richmond. There was far less argument in those days about the desirability of petitioning chapters. But there was no more guess work about it then than now for each local had to pass Billy's inspection standand and, it may be said, many were rejected at a time when their charter fees would have been very welcome. On one of these trips into the then far west, from the fraternity point of view, Billy traveled as far west as Iowa, getting off the train with the price of a sandwich in his pocket. But loyal brothers back in Richmond came to his aid by each throwing in money into a traveling fund to return the Grand Secretary to fraternity headquarters.

Billy finds it interesting to look back and compare the difficulties of establishing chapters in our early days with the ease of the present day. There were but few faculty members to be found then that did not look upon a fraternity as a symbol of all things undesirable. Almost invariably opposition was met in entering a new college. Today the situation is reversed. Educators are taking a totally different view of the fraternity and, it may be admitted, fraternities of today are taking a much different attitude toward faculties. College authorities are almost invariably glad to welcome the entrance of the fraternity, realizing that fraternities are serving their purpose in the educational system. With the great increase in enrollments faculties have been confronted by disciplinary and social problems that are largely insoluble except with fraternity cooperation. Consequently, opposition and discouragement has been transformed into hearty welcomes and cooperation and both the colleges and the fraternities are the better for the changed condition.

In those early years of the fraternity administrative problems were borne almost exclusively by the Grand Secretary. It is true that he had an executive committee to assist him but matters were largely left to Billy and only at Conclaves and the rare intervals of executive committee meetings were any decisions made in which others gave their counsel. Knowing this it is not to be wondered that those Richmond Sig Eps who have followed Billy's service to the fraternity with an intimate contact are quick to give him credit for the magnificent growth and internal development that we have enjoyed.

As a contrast, conditions have changed somewhat recently. An executive committee is functioning for the first time in our history. Administrative problems are submitted to the common counsel of the seven members of the executive committee, guided largely by the information and experience supplied by Billy. An extensive correspondence flourishes between members of the executive committee and the Grand Secretary and instead of one man alone being in touch with fraternity affairs, seven men, experienced in fraternity administrative problems, are giving to the fraternity their interested support and counsel.

It has been a source of great satisfaction to Billy Phillips to see the fraternity make its remarkable growth. Many times he has remarked that in the beginning the founders had hopes of a substantial growth but the reality has far surpassed their fondest expectations. This will be readily appreciated when one considers that few persons would believe that starting with a half dozen men this organization in twenty odd years would have a membership of more than 8,000 and fifty chapters. The competition was sharp from the first. Of recent years there have been a great many new fraternities organized but in those days it was a most unusual event and the newcomer in the fraternity field was subjected to no small amount of ridicule, rebuffs and discouragements. Being so few "upstart" fraternities were "radicals." They were to be taken as a jest and ridiculed out of existence. We have it upon Billy's word that in its early years Sigma Phi Epsilon—the "Sacred Hearts," to use the local Richmond epithet—received their full share of what has been more modernly termed "razzing."

From the first the thought on the part of the founders was to make of the fraternity a national organization. But how to get a foothold was a problem. To establish branch chapters in the hands of well established locals seemed well nigh impossible. The aspiring local had but to consult Baird's Manual of College Fraternities to find a substantial number of strong, well-established fraternities whose constant growth indicated that they were inclined to favorable action upon worthy petitions. Why become the second, third or fourth chapter of a budding national when a charter could be had from one of the older national organizations? It was a difficult question to answer. But Billy and his colleagues realized that personal contact alone would build a good will for the then known "Alpha Chapter" of Sigma Phi Epsilon and enable it to establish other chapters. The chapter therefore set forth on a campaign within their own state where small colleges abounded with the intent of winning the friendship and confidence of college men in other institutions. It was not until William Andrew Wallace, one of the founders, in the year after Sigma Phi Epsilon came into existence left Richmond College and matriculated in what was known as the University College of Medicine in Richmond that a second chapter was added, known as Virginia Beta. Chartered in the fall of 1902 with five members, it never added another and its charter was later surrendered. But it served as a stepping stone and was useful in interesting the next chapter, Virginia Gamma, which likewise survived only a short time. It was chartered in 1903 with seven members and the next year added a half dozen more before it gave up the ghost. But these two offshoots made it possible to charter West Virginia Alpha—the third chapter that was to expire before a really permanent chapter was annexed to the parent organization.

That original offshoot, Virginia Beta, made it possible to establish three sub chapters in 1903 of which West Virginia Beta has come down to the present and is honored as one of the finest, most virile and progressive chapters upon the chapter roll. From this time on easier sailing was encountered. A few "false starts" were made by chartering chapters that later became extinct but they were, indeed, few and getting new and promising charters became a far easier task. There were talking points to be had by that time. There was some slight thread of history to be referred to. There was some proof that Sigma Phi Epsilon was actually headed toward its goal of becoming a national organization.

Discouragements are numerous in almost all new enterprises but there are few college undertakings that encounter the discouragements Billy Phillips had to face—for it was he, and he alone, that bore the brunt. Others were interested, it is true, but it was he that carried the plan next to his heart and that gave it the work and thought that brought accomplishment out of mere hope. But those trials are a thing of the past. Billy now looks back upon them with a feeling of pleasure born of the knowledge that each hurdle in the path was safely cleared and the course to date has been successfully run.

While Billy's foremost thought is at all times concerned with fraternity affairs he has his diversions. Fraternity work is his vocation; the development of "Eastbury," his summer home down on the beautiful James River is his avocation. "Eastbury," usually referred to by Billy and his better half, "Aunt Molly," as the "fahm" is really an enchanting place to any one who likes the out-of-doors. Some years ago Billy, foreseeing its real estate possibilities, bought a substantial estate some twenty miles east of Richmond and situated on the James River. This he divided into smaller tracts, each having a frontage on the river and reserved for his own use the best of the locations to which he attached the name that descended with the estate "Eastbury." He has since disposed of the other tracts at profits which entirely paid for the whole tract and his own "fahm" represents no cost to him except as to improvements placed upon it. He and "Aunt Molly" have planned and have had constructed a charming bungalow upon it that, with the surrounding trees, the mile and half of water of the broad James and the tilled acres at its rear makes a small farm of unusual attractiveness. Except in the four or five months of winter when the Phillips family moves into a Richmond apartment, "Eastbury" is their home. The twenty miles to and from Richmond are over good roads and Billy's Ford is kept in good repair so that living down on the "fahm" is to them little different than living on the edge of any large city.

And you should know "Aunt Molly," Billy's right hand "man." "Aunt Molly's" business is exclusively that of attending to her rotund husband. She is a natural born manager and Billy is the object of her management. Of course, she is an expert shopper, she knows just how to handle the ebony cook in the Phillips housesold so as to get the best results and in all other respects is the efficient housewife of the genteel southern household. But she is more than that. She has absorbed so much information relating to the fraternity and knows so many of its personalities, that she is Billy's business companion as well as his domestic sovereign and the two together comprise a well nigh perfect complement.

Billy is a member of the Kiwanis Club of Richmond and one of its most interested members. Perhaps the fact that our Grand Treasurer, Frank O. Louthan, is the guiding spirit of that organization and has been for years has something to do with it. Whether it is or not it can be said that Billy is by nature a "good feeler," he likes to meet and mingle with people and Kiwanis affords him such an opportunity. He is also a member of the Masonic lodge, of the York Rite bodies and of the Shrine. It goes almost without saying that he is a constant attendant at the weekly luncheons of the Richmond Alumni Chapter as well as the other meetings of that organization.

Conclaves have always been an admixture of pleasure and grief to Billy. He greatly enjoys the contact with the membership and the evolution of plans for the development of the fraternity. But preparation for Conclaves has always represented a great deal of additional work. It has always been his practice to have available for use at the Conclave any information of any nature that might be desired by any member. Abstracting data from voluminous records has demanded a great deal of time outside of his usual duties. Then at Conclaves themselves there is always a tremendous demand made of the Grand Secretary. Every delegate present, it seems, wants some bit of information and he wants a private conference to secure it. Individuals and groups want conferences with Billy to iron out some grievance, usually imaginary, and others want just a good visit with this genial fraternity manager whom they have grown to love. All in all it takes some adroit dodging and some feats of diplomacy to enable Billy to get the minimum of sleep. But he wouldn't have it otherwise—so he has said many times.

Upper—House Party at "Eastbury"

 Lower—The Bungalow at "Eastbury"

Mention has been made of the volume of work to be done in the office of the Grand Secretary. Unless one has had an intimate contact with that office they can scarcely appreciate the demands made in caring for purely routine business. When it is recalled that a very considerable correspondence passes between this office and each of the fifty chapters; that a large number of the 8,000 and more alumni of the fraternity write to the Central Office off and on; that all JOURNAL subscriptions, chapter directories and individual addresses are kept there; that the most careful record of all receipts and disbursements of the fraternity are kept—when one considers all of these details he may know that a full day's work must be done in the Central Office every day if the work is to be handled. There are times when for many days in succession Billy is at his office throughout the day and a fair share of the night in addition in an effort to get abreast of the work without incurring the expense of additional help.

Any one who is familiar with the work will know that the Central Office is run with the utmost of economy. In the early years—indeed, until just the last few years—fraternity funds were pitifully inadequate. The progress of the fraternity, it may be fairly stated, has been many times seriously retarded by lack of money. This financial pressure over so many years has been a problem that has at all times confronted Billy. Others might be informed of it but return to their own affairs and be able to forget it. In Billy's case it represented the problem of every day. To economize in every possible way became, first, a necessity and, later, a habit. Consequently, there is many a time when practicing the economy of early years Billy does himself an injustice in carrying a heavier load than necessary.

This burden has been much lightened since the office of Traveling Secretary was created. The Traveling Secretary is now enabled to spend his summer months at the Central Office and a good many things can be got out of the way by advance preparation. The development of plans is likewise stimulated by the mutual contact of the two secretaries. When all is said, however, there are periods of very heavy work in the Central Office that cannot be lightened by summer work for the very reason that it is impossible to anticipate their nature.

CENTRAL OFFICE—View from Grand Secretary's Office
Getting Out Alumni Dues Letters

It should be said in this connection that the burden of detail work in the Central Office could be greatly lightened and all of it made easier if reasonable attention were given correspondence by the chapters. There are many chapters that seemingly use no more businesslike methods than would be expected of a number of grammar school boys. Despite the fact that it is only common courtesy to answer letters there are chapters within the fraternity that require letter after letter, with much time lost between, before an answer can be secured. The matter may involve some important information but it goes quite unheeded. Is this inattention to chapter business an index to the quality of the chapter? Billy, after his years of observation, says it is.

"When a chapter starts neglecting its correspondence and reports it is usually a pretty sure sign that the chapter is slipping," Billy states in response to the above question. "Businesslike methods are required to obtain good fraternity operation. Unless scholarship problems, chapter activities, discipline and other incidents of fraternity management are handled in a businesslike way they are certain to be a failure. Businesslike methods extend not only to the matters of scholarship, activities and discipline, but to the administrative details of correspondence and reports. Show me a chapter that is prompt and careful in these things and I will show you a chapter that is governed by good management generally and is successful in its chapter work." After so many years of work with the chapters with his opportunities for observation no one will want to dispute Billy's opinion in this matter.

No account of Billy Phillips and his work would be complete without mention of his relations with the executives of other fraternities. Only once in the many years of his existence has Billy failed to attend the Interfraternity Conference. At these meetings he has always been a quiet counselor in fraternity problems, never seeking publicity yet always willing to give the best of his information and experience. This has brought him a large circle of friends in other fraternities who have grown to highly regard him for his wisdom in fraternity affairs and for his personal worth. He has brought to the councils of the Interfraternity Conference a broad outlook upon fraternity problems. He has a high conception of what the fraternity can mean to education and that has ever been uppermost in his attitude toward the multitude of problems dealt with by the Conference.

What Billy Phillips' work has meant to Sigma Phi Epsilon is not possible of calculation. There are years ahead that cannot be appraised. Billy himself has shrunk from publicity by careful avoidance of any statement that might be construed as self appreciation. Not until a careful history of our fraternity is written, when records have been examined and a better knowledge had than any person other than Billy now possesses will it be possible to say what Billy's work has meant to our fraternity. But most of us can pretty fairly estimate the value of his efforts. If it were given the vast majority of the members of the fraternity to appraise his work the answer would be, "Without Billy Phillips we should be without Sigma Phi Epsilon." Its creation we owe to him to a large extent, its early development is to be wholly accredited to him, its subsequent growth, its flowering and fruitage, bears an impress from his hand that is unmistakable. And we, the beneficiaries of his work, acknowledge our gratitude and our indebtedness for this work to which he has given his heart, his soul and a lifetime of valuable service.

John Nathan Cobb, Washington Beta, Author Naturalist and Educator

By HELMER M. HALVERSON, Washington Beta

YOU all know the old saying, "You cannot keep a good man down." This same saying will also apply to the worthy fraternity brother who continually keeps his honorable past from being exposed to the fraternity. Sooner or later someone will bring it before the brothers through the medium of the SIGMA PHI EPSILON JOURNAL. The writer will now introduce Brother John Nathan Cobb, Washington Beta.

Cobb was born February 20, 1868, in Oxford, New Jersey, a small town on the Delaware River. He did not remain there long for his parents moved to the state of Pennsylvania while he was but a small child. In the neighborhood of Scranton, Pennsylvania, Cobb grew up and received his education. He started out in the newspaper business, becoming a reporter for the Scranton paper and later its editor. This work he followed for four years.

Brother Cobb was appointed field agent for the United States Bureau of Fisheries in 1895. Today he is considered one of the leading authorities in the fishery world. He remained with the Bureau of Fisheries some seventeen years. During that time he visited every government hatchery and cannery in the continental U. S. A. Later he extended his work to Canada, Mexico, South Sea Islands, Hawaiian Islands and Alaska. Cobb has written some 100 books; during his stay with the Bureau they consisted chiefly of governmental publications. Some of his leading works are: The Fisheries of Lake Ontario, 1897; The Commercial Fisheries of Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and Niagara and St. Lawrence Rivers, 1900; The Lobster Fishery of Maine, 1901; The Sponge Fishery of Florida, 1900; The Commercial Fisheries of the Hawaiian Islands, 1902-5; Fisheries of Alaska, 1905-11; Investigation Relative to the Shad Fisheries of North Carolina, 1906; The Salmon Fisheries of the Pacific Coast, 1911; The Pacific Cod Fisheries, 1916; The Pacific Salmon Fisheries, 1917, rev. edit. 1921; The Canning of Fishery Products, 1919, and Fish Cookery, 1921. He has also written continually for various magazines. For several years he was editor of the Associated Sunday Paper, a supplement dealing with the curios of fish, etc. This supplement was issued in conjunction with the larger papers of the east. He was editor of the Pacific Fisherman from 1913 to 1917.

JOHN NATHAN COBB

Brother Cobb holds the distinction of being director of the only college of fishery on the western hemisphere. There is only one other school of its kind in the world, this being in Japan. The establishment of the college of fishery at the University of Washington was under discussion for some time, but it was not until 1919 when Brother Cobb took over the directorship that the college got under way. The college has been growing by leaps and bounds ever since and today it is far superior to the Japanese school which has been in existence for many years. It is the aim of the college to turn out four types of men; the man with executive ability who has a thorough knowledge of the fishery industry; the technologist, an expert in one or more lines, such as canning, or refrigeration; the science research student; and the fish culturist.

Brother Cobb has his students spoken for long before they graduate. This is something that rarely takes place in any other college. There has been only one student in this college that has chosen another profession upon his graduation. Cobb has also added the commercial preservation of fruit and vegetables, to the course of fisheries, and it will not be long before complete instruction can be given in these lines.

At the present time Cobb is in charge of investigating the problem connected with the protection of the fisheries in the construction of power and irrigation dams; that is, getting fish over dams on their migration both up and down streams and protecting the young fish from the perils of irrigation ditches and power turbines. This research is of the greatest importance and is a line of investigation on which very little systematic work has been done in the past. If successful it will relieve the power interest of a great deal of opposition and enable them to exploit locations from which they would otherwise be barred.

Brother Cobb, as you can undoubtedly realize, is a very busy man, but nevertheless he finds time to drop in frequently and say a few words to his fraternity brothers. Aside from being a member of Washington Beta, he also holds membership in the following: American Fisheries Society (Vice President, 1924), Pacific Fishery Society (President, 1921, 1923), Western Society Naturalists, Ecol. Society of America, California Academy of Science, A. A. A. S. Conglist, and the Arctic Club of Seattle.

Frank R. Jeffrey Mentioned For Governor of Washington

RANK R. JEFFREY, D. C. Alpha, has been the recipient of considerable mention in Washington state newspapers for the governorship of Washington but he has definitely refused to stand as a candidate in the primaries at this time. As United States district attorney for the eastern district of Washington he holds a position of responsibility and importance and declared himself to be well satisfied with his situation for the present.

FRANK R. JEFFREY
D. C. ALPHA

Jeffrey was appointed United States district attorney in 1921 by President Harding at a time when he was engaged in the practice of law at Kennewick Washington, with the firm of Moulton & Jeffrey. He had been a member of that firm ever since his graduation from George Washington University in 1913.

It was while in college that he became one of the charter members of District of Columbia Alpha with twenty others who promoted the enterprise of a new fraternity at George Washington. That was in 1909. After his four years in college he migrated to the Pacific northwest, settling in the eastern part of Washington.

At the beginning of the war Brother Jeffrey entered the service and was commissioned a first lieutenant of field artillery in the Washington national guards. He recruited a battery which later became part of the 146th Field Artillery. He served in the army two years, eighteen months of which was overseas where he saw some of the worst of the fighting. While in France he was promoted to the rank of captain and later was made a major.

There were those in war time who aspired to an "officer's rank and safety." In Frank R. Jeffrey's experience as an officer there was little of safety although he escaped without injury. "Who's Who and Why" shows that he was cited for gallantry in the Meuse-Argonne offensive, a fact that tells not a little.

Upon receiving his discharge he returned to Kennewick, Washington, and resumed the practice of law, but not to remain unknown. In September, 1919, he was called by his comrades to serve as the first commander of the American Legion in the state of Washington, which post he held with credit to himself and the Legion. In 1921 came the appointment to the office of United States district attorney for the eastern division of Washington and he removed to Spokane, where he may be found by visiting Sig Eps at his office in the Federal Building.

In addition to his membership in Sigma Phi Epsilon Brother Jeffrey is a member of Delta Sigma Rho, a Mason, a member of the Consistory of the Scottish Rite, an Elk, a member of the Lions Internationale and of the Spokane Country Club. He is thirty-four years old, married and the father of one child,—a future Sig Ep.

Llewellyn Pfankuchen, Minnesota Alpha, Wins Forensic Contest

IN an oratorical contest held by the Northern Oratorical League, representing the larger colleges and universities in the northern part of the United States, Llewellyn E. Pfankuchen, a member of Minnesota Alpha, won first place and the attention of the press in various parts of the country. Speaking on the subject, "The Control of Progress," his work was declared to be a brilliant piece of forensic effort. Pfankuchen graduated last spring, completing his four-year college course in just three years. Unusual in itself his record is the more worthy of attention by reason of the fact that in his last year his excellence in scholastic work brought him the coveted election to Phi Beta Kappa.

Throughout his college course Pfankuchen has been identified with forensic activities. In both oratory and in debate he has taken an active part in class and college work and has performed brilliantly. As a freshman he was a member of the championship team that performed the unheard of feat of winning from the three higher and supposedly wiser classes in debating. As a sophomore he was the winner of the sophomore oratorical contest in addition to taking second place in the John S. Pillsbury Oratorical Contest. His third and last year brought him the championship of the Northern Oratorical League Contest held at the University of Michigan.

Pfankuchen, in addition to his membership in Sigma Phi Epsilon, is a member of Delta Sigma Rho and the local society, Shakopean Literary Society.

Sixth Annual Banquet
Seventh District

April 24, 1924

SEVENTH DISTRICT CONVENTION BANQUET, APRIL 26, 1924

Seventh District Convention Held In Kansas City

By EARL W. FROST, Kansas Beta

THE sixth annual convention of the Seventh District of Sigma Phi Epsilon was held at the Hotel Baltimore in Kansas City, under the auspices of the Kansas City Alumni Chapter, on April 26th. Promoted by that matchless organizer, the incarnation of "pep" personified, one Thomas H. Neal, and by Paul Koontz, "Dutch" Schmidt and numerous others, the convention assumed large proportions and was a real success, thoroughly enjoyed by almost one hundred of the brothers who were in attendance.

An informal meeting and conference, with Tommy Neal of the Kansas City Alumni Chapter as chairman, was held in the afternoon for the discussion of matters pertaining to the fraternity at large and the advancement of fraternity interests in the Seventh District. Chairman Neal spoke of the need of bringing the various chapters in the district into a closer fraternity relationship and promoting and building co-operation and solidarity of action and effort among the chapters in the district. A general discussion of rushing, chapter finances and chapter organization followed, speakers representing the various chapters reporting on the activities of their chapters along these lines and making helpful suggestions and criticisms.

The subject of rushing received careful consideration and a plan was formulated whereby the chapters of the Seventh District would co-operate more closely in securing good men for the fraternity. Pursuant to such plan the Kansas City Alumni Chapter has forwarded to the various chapters printed forms in the nature of a District Rush Card, to be distributed among the alumni and active members of each chapter in the district. The forms contain the names and addresses of the rush captains of all the chapters in the district and appropriate spaces for the filling in of desired information concerning prospective men and as soon as filled in will be sent to the rush captain of the chapter where the prospect is going to school. The rush captain of that chapter will then send the member a rush card of his chapter and the prospect will be dated in accordance with the same. It was the consensus of opinion that the plan above outlined is particularly well adapted for use in the Seventh District owing to the geographical distribution of the chapters and should be of material assistance in connection with the problem of rushing and the securing of a large number of desirable prospects from which the chosen few may be selected.

Another subject of discussion was that of being a good alumnus. It was particularly emphasized that the time to start training to be a good alumnus is while you are still an active member. The man who really gets into things while an active member will almost invariably be a good alumnus.

The banquet in the evening was a gala occasion. The brethren came arrayed and costumed in varied attire ranging from overalls to full dress, evidently anticipating anything from a bull-fight to a funeral and although neither actually took place none of the brothers were disappointed.

Joseph W. Ivy, of Georgia Alpha, ably and in his very pleasing and characteristic southern manner, presided as toastmaster. The spirit of brotherhood and good cheer abounded and the dining hall rang with the songs of Sigma Phi Epsilon. The tables fairly groaned beneath a load of culinary delights and after giving them due attention a session filled with oratory and music ensued.

Tommy Neal, of Kansas Alpha, spoke on "Chapter Aggressiveness" and defined aggressiveness in relation to Sigma Phi Epsilon as meaning "Fight Like Hell." Every man must get out and do all he can all of the time," he said. "The fraternity cannot stand still. It must either progress or go backwards. If every man puts all he has into it, it cannot help climbing to the front."

Harvey E. Hartz, of Michigan Alpha, in his talk on "Safety First" pointed out that whatever is done as individuals reflects on the fraternity as a whole, and that the public is watching for the undesirable things much more closely than for the other.

Paul G. Koontz, Grand Marshal, of Missouri Alpha, talking on "Our National Outlook" emphasized the position of Sigma Phi Epsilon among national fraternities and pointed out that if Sigma Phi Epsilon continued to develop as it has been doing it will soon be the leading fraternity.

C. W. (Dutch) Schmidt, of New York Beta and the Des Moines Alumni Chapter, spoke on the subject, "What Sig Ep means to an Alumnus" and outlined the importance of co-operation between the active chapters and the alumni, and emphasized the fact that Sigma Phi Epsilon should hold a big place in a man's life after graduation as by closer contact, he, his brothers, and the fraaterity as a whole, will profit more.

Earle W. Frost, of Kansas Beta, talked on "Sig Ep Progress," giving some data showing indisputably Sigma Phi Epsilon's rapid development in the few brief years of its existence as a national fraternity.

The various active chapters in the district were represented by orators of the first class who told of chapter activities and displayed wit and humor that would have done credit to Irvin Cobb or a Ring Lardner, but space forbids that the details be set forth herein.

At the close of the evening's festivities the brethren departed to their various domiciles, every brother feeling that he had experienced one of the real big times of his life and that words could not express his love for old Sigma Phi Epsilon, the fraternity of fraternities!

The Central Office Viewpoint

By CLARENCE H. FREEARK, Ex-Traveling Secretary

NE of the cardinal principles of American jurisprudence is that a man shall not be condemned without a hearing. This same principle is ever present in sporting circles of America and is interwoven in the whole fabric of American life. There are two sides to every question and the fair-minded man will consider both before reaching a decision. During my tour of the chapters throughout the country and in conversations with alumni I listened to occasional criticisms and grievances against the Central Office. Many of these are the results of misunderstanding and lack of facts concerning the Central Office and also a short sightedness in viewing the subject from one side only.

These criticisms and grievances cover the whole range of subjects pertinent to our national organization and it shall be my endeavor to present the Central Office viewpoint, after having seen the situation from both angles.

Many chapters have complained that they have not been visited nor given the aid and guidance that they needed in years past. This fact is too well known and appreciated to call forth any denial from the Central Office. But there have been physical difficulties that stood in the way of a closer contact with all the units, although the Central Office does not wish to shirk the responsibility for its mistakes. Errors have been made and we are frank to admit it, but it is believed a fuller understanding of all the circumstances will cause the criticism to be less harsh.

During the twenty-three years of existence of this fraternity, sixty-one chapters have been installed, an average of about three a year. In addition many locals were visited and inspected on which action was not taken. Each year there were at least two Executive Committee meetings to attend, the Inter-Fraternity Conference in New York, district conferences, alumni association to visit, the biennial Conclave to prepare for, and on top of it all an office to keep going.

As the fraternity spread the distance between chapters became greater and the time consumed in visiting them likewise became greater, necessitating fewer and shorter visits. Those chapters off the main road were slighted, naturally, but it was not the intention or the desire to show any favoritism. It was a case of physical difficulties to be overcome. Bear in mind that all this was done by one man up to last year and it had to be done in the course of thirty-six weeks which were in turn broken up by holidays, examination periods, recesses and different opening and closing times at various institutions.

These are the reasons that have in the past prevented us from handling our organization as we should have liked. With a full time traveling secretary on the road, and definite constructive policies to guide us in the future, these criticisms will, it is hoped, be satisfactorily met.

Some chapters have complained that they have not received the aid and counsel of the Central Office, and they doubtless have some cause for dissatisfaction. In the early days the Central Office was not strong itself and each unit had to be more or less self-sustaining. More effort and attention was given to building up the organization than to strengthening what we already had. It has only been within the last few years that any organized effort has been made to improve the individual chapter. Many alumni have been outspoken in their criticism of the Central Office for its failure to aid their chapters, yet these same alumni have never made a single constructive suggestion to accomplish the desired end. Even now when we have approached some of them with a definite system and tried to enlist their cooperation to stabilize the chapters, it is not always to be had. Lest there be a misunderstanding, let it be said that many alumni throughout the country have nobly responded to our appeals for co-operation and assistance in putting over our financial plan, but these men have seldom offered criticism. They have endeavored in their own way to help the chapters and were more than willing to cooperate with the Central Office in our new national effort.

Many times I have been asked by actives and alumni why we do not have a chapter in this or that institution. When I ask them if there are any good locals available or if they can give me any information on the fraternity situation there, the answer is practically always negative. The initiative for new chapters in the vicinity of present chapters is with the actives and alumni in that section. The Central Office cannot create a local; it is too far away to do so. Bear in mind, too, that practically every member of the fraternity has a different idea on expansion. Hence the Central Office gets it from all sides.

At the 1921 Conclave, at Des Moines, a long discussion about the JOURNAL was conducted. Much dissatisfaction with the publication was voiced. The present editor has done wonders with the magazine, but until recently he has had to print everything submitted. Even then it took much hammering, threatening, and appealing to get what little material was published. Those who have criticised in the past have done the least toward submitting articles, news or notes and have seldom contributed toward its financial support. After the delegates at the Conclave had condemned the JOURNAL in eloquent terms, there has been no noticeable improvement in the chapter letters, and in some cases still the chapters are delinquent in submitting these letters.

Much dissatisfaction has been heard about the write-up in the previous (9th) edition of Baird's Manual. The 10th edition is now out and although the section devoted to Sigma Phi Epsilon is much improved over the old one, complaints may be expected about it and we admit it could be further improved. Yet information for this write-up was requested in the Central Office Bulletin prior to the submission of copy and only one chapter sent in any data.

I have been asked many times when a new directory is to be published. We have about $2,000 tied up in the last edition of the directory and from the present outlook most of the copies now on hand will represent a dead loss. During the past session several requests were made through the Central Office Bulletin and many personal requests have been made by the Traveling Secretary for up-to-date lists of alumni addresses. Only four chapters responded and some of the addresses on these were not as late as those already on file in this office.

By reading back over the several issues of the Central Office Bulletin for last year it will be discovered that a number of other things were requested of the chapters. With the exception of one or two there has been no response whatsoever. Even the monthly reports have not come in regularly although this matter has been taken up with the chapters individually and through the Bulletin.

Disgruntled alumni have been encountered all over the country because the chapters have failed to show them the courtesy of a reply to their letters. Then the chapters wonder why they cannot get the alumni to send them the names of rushees or make contributions toward their house funds.

I remember I visited same chapters the year I served as Traveling Secretary where some, in fact a good many, of the men did not know who I was. If they knew I was the Traveling Secretary, they did not know my name; and if they knew my name, they did not know of my position. I have met alumni at the chapters, who, when they learned I was a visiting brother, asked me what I was selling. When they were informed that I was the Traveling Secretary, they stammered in their embarrassment and remembered that they had read my articles in the JOURNAL or had heard about me.

In the Central Office Bulletins various items of information were published. Yet, in a number of instances, I have had brothers ask me questions that were answered in the Bulletins, and often the Bulletin in particular was at the time on their bulletin board. In a few cases—and I am glad to say there were only a few—after receiving a fine response from the chapter and local alumni to the presentation of the financial plan, no further action was taken after I had gone on my way.

It is easy enough to sit comfortably in the stands and “razz” the quarterback for the way he runs his team, but when you don a uniform and try to negotiate the muddy gridiron with a slippery pigskin under your arm and some real obstacles to overcome in the form of husky opponents—well, that is a different story.

But what is the object of all this “growl” you might ask? In the first place, it is not a “growl,” nor is there any malice or personal feeling involved in presenting it. It is simply a statement of the Central Office viewpoint, a few facts that perhaps you have not fully appreciated before. Perhaps it will help you to understand some of the practical difficulties encountered by the grand officers and others who are endeavoring to build our fraternity in the fulfillment of their trust. Yet in spite of all the disheartening conditions mentioned above, we are not discouraged. We must appraise the problems that must be solved to improve our organization, and lay our plans accordingly. It takes time to institute a new idea or bring about a change in a fraternity, but as our organization becomes stronger these things will be accomplished with greater ease and efficiency.

Let us come to a mutual understanding first, last and all the time that due to the youth and inexperience of our members and the constantly changing personnel of our chapters, it is extremely difficult to build up an efficient organization. In the normal course of events the young men who compose our active chapters have not learned the lessons of business thoroughness in running their units. We do not hold this against them, for doubtless we were as bad if not worse when we were in college. It is simply a condition that confronts us and must be met. Since the war many ex-service men (older heads) have come into our fraternity and have done much to improve the chapters' efficiency. The younger men who follow them will have a worthy example to endeavor to emulate.

We must have the fullest cooperation from the active chapters and alumni. The Central Office cannot handle our great organization all alone and from a great distance. And the grand officers want the benefit of your ideas and experiences. The ideas engendered by the combined experience of all members are certain to be of value in the building of the fraternity.

I have outlined the Central Office viewpoint with the thought that much of our inefficiency results from thoughtlessness. It may be that seeing the problem of fraternity administration from the Central Office may lead chapter officials to give that office a closer cooperation and bring about a membership better informed as to fraternity matters.

Three Illinois Alpha Men Head Illini Athletic Teams

By STANLEY J. FAIRWEATHER, Illinois Alpha

NOT content with winning three captaincies for 1924, Illinois Alpha took over "control" of baseball when Gus Jaudes was elected senior baseball manager. Our captains are Lester B. (Bud) Schlapprizzi, baseball captain, Phillip E. McFarland, swimming captain, and Sam. C. Marzulo, leader of the cross country team. No other fraternity on the campus can equal this record. Bud Schlapprizzi has confined his varsity competition to baseball, playing shortstop for two seasons, but in his freshman year he won numerals in football, basketball and baseball.

Phil McFarland, who won third place in diving at the conference meet in Chicago this year, was diving champion of the city of Chicago before entering the University. He was elected president of Dolphins, honorary swimming fraternity, for next year. He also made two letters on the varsity gym team.

Sam Marzulo is a two-miler as well as a cross country man, and has been a member of Coach Gill's championship teams for the past two years.

Gus Jaudes, baseball manager, and Bud Schlapprizzi, captain, next-door neighbors since childhood, have been almost as close together as the Siamese twins in their rise to campus fame. Both of them made Sachem, junior men's honor society, and Mawanda, senior men's honor society. They are our first two men to make both these organizations. St. Louis, Mo., is their home.

It is odd that only one of these four leaders, McFarland, lives in Illinois. Marzulo, the other captain, hails from Rochester, N. Y.

Fred Graham, West Virginia Beta, 1924 Football Captain

THE coming football season bids fair to be one of the most notable of the great years West Virginia University has been enjoying of late. A strong schedule faces that team, but there is a strong team to face the schedule. From this complex many thrilling gridiron battles are expected to arise. The squad of veterans came together last fall with the purpose of finding a leader. They must have a man who could think in time of action and could lead his teammates to victory or at least through an honestly played, hard-fought game. Such a man was not easy to find, but there was one, and he was chosen. This man was our own Fred Graham, who has held down an end position for three years, and has proven himself a man worthy of the trust.

Graham has been active in more things than football. Last winter he made the basketball squad and played in several games. He is also a member of many of the campus and national honorary organizations.

The approval of Graham's election shown by the students indicates that he will have the support of the entire University as well as that of the team.

"Steamer" Nason Bats Out Another Fictional Hit

WITH the appearance of "A Hearty Meal" in the September 20th issue of Adventure, Leonard H. Nason, Vermont Alpha, better known to Boston alumni as "Steamer" Nason, has registered another appearance in this well-known magazine since the publication of "A Tragedy of Errors" which was described in the last issue of the JOURNAL and has won himself a higher place in the appreciation of members of the fraternity who follow his work.

"A Hearty Meal" is a fine bit of writing. It is vivid, realistic, crisp and, above all, compellingly interesting. As is true of most of Nason's stories, the plot is laid in army life—an experience appreciated by so many members of this fraternity. The vicissitudes of the "Plumber," the ludicrous depiction of his woes and discomforts keeps the reader smilingly engrossed throughout the early chapters. Then all at once he is dropped into an eddy of excitement that abruptly ends only when one reaches the end of the narrative.

"A Healty Meal" is good reading for any one. It is especially good reading for those of us who are following the work of a brother who, in addition to his literary endeavors, is one of the moving spirits in the Boston alumni association that is rapidly becoming a most useful organization. Nason is a prolific writer and as one of the regular staff of contributors to Adventure may be found in print at almost any time. But don't forget to get the issue of September 20th for a good laugh and a generous measure of excitement.

Kansas Gamma Wins Intra-Mural Tennis Championship

large loving cup adorns the mantel of Sigma Phi Epsilon at Kansas University. It is proof of the claims of Kansas Gamma members that they have among their numbers the best tennis players on the Jayhawk campus. Last spring, under the leadership of the college authorities a tennis tournament was arranged including most of the fraternities. The teams entering the tournament were divided in two divisions, the winners in each division playing off the finals for the championship. The Kansas Gamma team had no difficulty in heading its division with wins over

McKelvie, Delaware Alpha, Will Lead Delaware Gridders

WILLIAM D. McKELVIE, Delaware Alpha, is just preparing for what should be one of Delaware University's most successful seasons following his unanimous election last fall as captain of the 1924 team. This is his senior year and it will give him four letters in football providing accident does not prevent him playing through the season. McKelvie's selection as captain of the Delaware grid team was most popular with the student body. He has been a hard worker who puts "pep" in his work and has been declared to be an ideal leader.

He made his letter in his freshman year at Delaware and each year since, although due to an operation just before the season opened he did not get into the game last year until the season was well on. It is said that McKelvie is the best Delaware tackle of all time.

In addition to already having three football letters he has made his track and basketball letters and is one of the few three-letter men at Delaware. He is a member of the Blue Lantern Society, an honorary organization, of the Druids, of the Athletic Council and of the Varsity Club. He weighs 195 pounds and is six feet one inch in height.

New York City Alumni Chapter In The Employment Field

IN the announcing of plans whereby the chapter will endeavor to find employment for members of the fraternity located within its jurisdiction the New York Alumni chapter has made the first definite step in an endeavor to which much discussion has been devoted for the last two or three years. Members of the chapter are being solicited with the view to locating available jobs having a future and Sig Eps in New York City are asked to apply to the secretary, W. O. Perry, 55 John Street, for information.

New York alumni have expressed the belief that a very valuable work in behalf of the fraternity can be performed in this way. Few graduates from college have any business connection at the time they receive their diplomas. There is, perhaps, no more difficult problem facing college authorities than that of fitting their graduates into remunerative positions after four years devoted to purely scholastic pursuits, completely out of touch with business affairs.

The New York Alumni chapter proposes to serve as a connecting link between members of the fraternity not yet adjusted to economic conditions and business men desiring to employ young men of ability and education. The attempt will be purely an experiment as no previous similar attempt within the fraternity has been made. It will be viewed with great interest on the part of alumni organizations throughout the country for there has been much discussion of this work and other chapters have expressed themselves as contemplating such work.

The secretary of the New York Alumni chapter, W. O. Perry of the W. O. Perry & Co., insurance brokers, is offering the facilities of his office as a clearing house for this work. Members in or out of New York having any suggestion for the work or knowing of available openings should communicate with Brother Perry.

MOTHER'S DAY AT KANSAS GAMMA

Eighteen Sig Eps at Ft. Snelling R.O.T.C.

By DONALD SAMPSON, Nebraska Alpha

WITH eighteen Sig Eps present, accounted for and in close association at the Seventh Corps Area Reserve Officers Training Corps held at Fort Snelling, Minn., last summer, the fraternity may be pronounced "well represented." One of this number, Davis of Missouri Alpha, was called home before the camp closed by illness in his family but seventeen members went through the entire period.

Not only was the fraternity heard from as to numbers but likewise for its camp activities. Athletics were a prominent feature of the camp work and in this field Sig Eps starred. Derry, Arkansas Alpha, proved himself the camp "cave man," winning the individual honors in the track meet. Incidentally, this is the third year that a member of our fraternity has won individual honors, Hope, Kansas Beta, having been the honor man the two preceding years. Derry is a weight and dash man and was also awarded a medal for having the most perfect physique in the camp.

SIG EPS AT FORT SNELLING R. O. T. C.

Top Row: Houston, Arkansas Alpha; Derry, Arkansas Alpha, Scott, Missouri Alpha; Nelson, Minnesota Alpha; Reeves, Missouri Alpha; Blackmun, Arkansas Alpha; Dow, Iowa Beta; Martin, Kansas Gamma.

Bottom Row: Parrish, Arkansas Alpha; Goodrich, Iowa Gamma; Jones, Iowa Gamma; Rumsey, Nebraska Alpha; Captain Bigelow, Iowa Beta; Hancock, Arkansas Alpha; Belden, Missouri Alpha; Dayton, Missouri Alpha; Sampson, Nebraska Alpha.

Blackmun, also an Arkansas Alpha member, had things all his own way in the tennis tournament, winning in the singles and, with a partner, in the doubles. He also had charge of the camp orchestra, himself playing a wicked fiddle.

Scott, Missouri Alpha, took first in the shot-put, while Goodrich, Iowa Gamma, placed in the mile. Hancock, Arkansas Alpha, played second base on the Arkansas baseball team, camp champions, and held down the same position on the all-camp team. Hancock and Belden, Missouri Alpha, each served as representatives of their respective schools on the staff of the Blue Torch, the camp annual.

Machine gun instruction at the camp was under the direction of Captain Bigelow, Iowa Beta.

The Sig Ep contingent located itself after arrival at the camp and some of the best of times were had by the men when together. On two different occasions Minnesota Alpha turned hosts to the men, giving them dances at the Minnesota Alpha chapter house. Both were splendid affairs and much appreciated by the visitors. On week-ends permission could be had to leave the camp, which is situated close to Minneapolis, and the Minnesota Alpha chapter house provided week-end lodging for the greater share of the Sig Eps in camp on many an occasion. These get-togethers and camp associations afforded the various members a fine opportunity to improve acquaintances and resulted in a great clearing house of fraternity ideas. With seven chapters represented, a considerable array of ideas could be arrayed on any phase of fraternity work, and it is safe to say that each member took home with him a wealth of new ideas for use within his chapter this next year.

Nebraska Alpha Holds What It Claims Is Record Banquet

WHAT members of Nebraska Alpha assert is the largest banquet ever given by any one chapter of the fraternity was held at the Lindell Hotel in Lincoln, Nebraska, on the evening of June 6th when ninety-two members of Nebraska Alpha and one member from one of the Kansas chapters were present. There have been several banquets in fraternity history exceeding one hundred members but none of them, it is believed, were given by a single chapter.

The Nebraska Alpha banquet was held at the close of the school year and during alumni week, known as the University of Nebraska Round Up. Several thousand alumni return to Lincoln for this event each spring and all fraternity and sorority banquets in the University of Nebraska are planned for this week. That almost half of Nebraska Alpha's membership, scattered as it is all over the country, returned for this reunion and banquet, was considered a remarkable record.

Clifford B. Scott, Grand Historian and Editor of the JOURNAL, presided as toastmaster. Those responding to toasts included Ralph L. Thiesen, Fred

Colby, Robert C. Russell and Gayle V. Grubb. The latter and Dr. Ben A. Dennis, who were at the time presenting an act in a Lincoln vaudeville house, were the features of the evening in a series of musical readings and songs, most of which were composed by Brother Grubb. Grubb will be remembered as the leader of the Southern Rag-a-Jazz orchestra, mostly composed of Sig Eps, that that a few years ago went abroad and startled English and French audiences and critics with their new and unique conceptions of syncopated harmony.

After the banquet the members went to the chapter house, purchased during the last year, and continued the reunion into the small hours of the morning. An unusual enthusiasm prevailed during the banquet and scores of brothers entered their pledge to be present next year and lend their aid in breaking the attendance record set this year.

Ex-Traveling Secretary Still Has An Itching Foot

HE traveling bug seems to have stung our first Traveling Secretary, C. H. Freeark, pretty hard. Freeark, after leaving the fraternity last November, settled in Chicago for two months in the employ of the Schreffler Efficiency Company, a firm specializing in the field of retail accountings, systems and research service. The "call of the road" was too strong, however, for after the first of the year the ex-traveling secretary tucked his belongings in a brief case and journeyed through the middle west and east.

Freeark's versatility is ever apparent for during his travels he installed systems, audited the books of department stores, prepared income tax returns, and then engaged in selling the service of his company to the unsuspecting merchants. Even though engaged in other pursuits, he has had time to visit several chapters, look up a number of alumni friends, fire suggestions in to the Grand Secretary's Office and keep the Grand President busy in answering his correspondence. The JOURNAL Editor, even, has not escaped Freeark's barrage of ideas.

If variety is the spice of life, Freeark is leading a rare existence. On July 1st he resigned his position with the Chicago Efficiency firm and took to selling merchandise behind the counter of a department. The reason for all this is that he must secure his experience in order to enter a training group conducted by the research bureau for better retailing at the University of Pittsburgh this fall to prepare himself for personnel work in the department store field. During the month of August the ex-fraternity marathoner spent his time in Champaign, Illinois, arranging the final details for the erection of "the model fraternity house" (so he claims and he ought to know) for Illinois Alpha this fall.

It keeps the JOURNAL Editor busy keeping Brother Freeark's address up to date, but we cannot afford to lose track of him.

Some girls aren't really bad; they're just broadminded.—Voo Doo.

Pennsylvania Epsilon Purchases Mansion For Chapter House

URING the closing months of the scholastic year, Pennsylvania Epsilon consummated the purchase of a new chapter house. Located at 61 West Market Street, in the center of the best residential district of Bethlehem, the house was for many years the home of a wealthy family. The heirs to the estate, being anxious to get rid of a large unoccupied property, sold the house to the active chapter at a figure much below its real value.

The property has been conservatively valued at $55,000.00 and its replacement cost would undoubtedly be much more than this. In order to handle the transaction the Pennsylvania Epsilon Corporation, incorporated under the laws of the state of Pennsylvania, was formed. Bonds were sold to actives and alumni and in this way enough funds were raised to finance the purchase.

The house is a large four story structure with brick walls twenty inches thick. It is located on a terrace above the street level. In the rear is a plot of ground which will some day become a tennis court. A beautiful old hedge surrounds the property. A wide covered porch across the front of the house is a favorite resting place in the afternoons.

On the first floor there is a reception hall, living room, music room, library, dining room, den, butler's pantry, and kitchen. All the floors are of solid oak and there are open fireplaces in the music and living rooms. The living room is finished in oak with a beamed ceiling, and two built-in seats by the fireplace. The library is also finished in oak, has a large semi-circular window seat, and built-in bookcases with leaded glass doors on two sides. A French door opens to a porch on the side of the house. The dining room has paneled oak walls, a beamed ceiling, and leaded glass windows. The den is located under the landing of the wide mahogany staircase which leads to the second floor.

On the second and third floors there are ten rooms, most of which are supplied with two closets each. There are two tiled bathrooms on each of these floors, four in all. All the rooms have high ceilings and are finished in white enamel, the finishings of the halls are dark oak. There are three sleeping porches, one opening off the second floor, and two from the third floor. On the fourth floor there are two sleeping rooms and a storage room for trunks.

Included in the purchase price were heavy specially made Persian rugs for the reception hall and the second floor hall, as well as room-size Persian rugs for the second floor rooms. Heavy tapestry portieres to hang between the hall and music room and the hall and library, and figured silk over-curtains for the first floor windows, were bought with the house, also over-stuffed tapestry window cushions for the living room and library.

The house is extremely well adapted for fraternity purposes and can easily care for a chapter of thirty men. The members of Pennsylvania Epsilon can take a very justifiable pride in their new home as it compares favorably with any house on the Lehigh campus.

Mention should be made of the admirable appearance the furniture of the chapter makes in the new house. For the past few years new furniture has been bought with the object in mind of ultimately owning a larger home. The leather divans and chairs "fit" the house as though they had been made for it.

The ownership of the new home is largely due to the untiring efforts of Edward H. Trevenet, Ohio Alpha, who, since taking up his residence in Bethlehem, has shown great interest in the chapter at Lehigh. It was he who discovered the house, closed the deal with the real estate agents, and it was through his influence that the first and second mortgages were placed.

Some of the financial details of the purchase are rather unusual and would be of interest to chapters not yet owning houses. The secretary of the chapter will be very glad to go into this at greater length than is possible in this article.

Sig Ep On Road to Prosperity Via Dude Ranch Route

dude ranch is not a new institution, neither is it well known to those who have not lived in the so-called "wild and woolly" west. Of course, the west is no longer "wild and woolly" as all westerners will assert and as easterners with western experience will admit. But the dude ranch is sometimes an attempt to give the impression of "wildness" and wooliness" to the inexperienced easterner and at all times it is a school of instruction in western life for the benefit of eastern matriculants.

Stow L. Witwer, Nebraska Alpha, is the entrepreneur behind a dude ranch located near Greeley, Colo., and specializing in dude ranch matters he should know what one of the things is. We'll let him define it in his own language: "It is a western cattle ranch whose owners entertain paying guests, who wish to escape from the stuffiness and formality of city life and who long for the open spaces away from the city and its traffic cops." That relieves any suspense we may have felt about the nature of a dude ranch and we may now proceed to appraise this institution of interest to the fraternity by reason of the fact that a Sig Ep guides its destinies.

The S. L. W. Ranch Resort, as it is called, is situated ten miles east of Greeley, Colo., and consists of 9,000 acres of land. Some 500 pure bred Hereford cattle are at all times kept upon the ranch which has a reputation to the quality of its blooded cattle. Indeed, S. L. W. Herefords were a noted product through Colorado and Wyoming long before a thought was given to dude ranching. Perhaps the largest house upon any ranch in Colorado affords accommodations for guests. The ranch maintains a fine string of saddle horses for the use of its guests as well as the "cow men" in charge of the herd. Guests are given the opportunity to learn the tricks of the "cow boy" trade under the tutelage of experts and the manager reports that some of his eastern guests have learned to cast a mean rope.

There are antelope and coyotes in ample numbers to delight the hearts of those who enjoy hunting and one may also fish close to the ranch home. Trips to the Rocky Mountain National Park, to Estes Park and other points of interest nearby have been on the summer's program. The past summer, the first given over to dude ranching, has been a decided success, according to Brother Witwer. The establishment ran at, or near, capacity at all times during the summer, guests coming from all parts of the east. Curiously enough, Brother Witwer had the pleasure of entertaining no less than a half dozen Sig Eps during the course of the summer, much to his delight.

National Scholarship Committee Appointed By Grand President Eastman

WITH the appointment of U. G. Dubach, Oregon Alpha, Walter A. Jessup, Iowa Gamma, and Charles W. McKenzie, New Hampshire Alpha, as the personnel of the scholarship committee of the fraternity created by the Columbus Conclave, Sigma Phi Epsilon has started its first determined effort, national in scope, to compel good scholarship on the part of all chapters. The appointment of these three members, with Brother Dubach as chairman, was made by Grand President Eastman last spring as the college session was closing.

All of the men appointed by the Grand President are peculiarly well qualified for the important work to be undertaken. Brother Dubach, for example, dean of men at Oregon State Agricultural College, has for a number of years guided the scholastic work of Oregon Alpha and made of that chapter a group without peer within our fraternity insofar as scholarship is concerned. Dr. Jessup, who is president of the State University of Iowa, holds an enviable reputation among educators throughout the middle west, is conversant with student problems and interested in making of the fraternity an adjunct of the college. Charles W. McKenzie, who is an instructor in political science at Dartmouth College, is not only in intimate contact with a large student body and cognizant of its problems, but is one of New Hampshire Alpha's most interested alumni and a bulwark of strength in the house corporation owning New Hampshire Alpha's chapter home. All three are men of whom the fraternity is proud and men who will be accorded the greatest respect in their effort to eliminate poor scholarship.

The first work done by the scholarship committee will be the submission of a questionnaire to all chapters to determine the nature of our problem. Conditions differ so widely in the various colleges that no one knows at the present time what may be the cause of any poor scholarship that may exist. Indeed, we do not know at the present time what chapters are the lowest in scholarship, it having been the custom of the past to make no mention of scholastic shortcomings. These will soon come to light and the whole fraternity will know what of its chapters are not doing satisfactory college work. Likewise those doing good work will receive that mention which they so well deserve for excellence in this phase of student activity.

A glance at the personnel of the scholarship committee will be of interest to all. Dr. U. G. Dubach, the chairman, graduated from the Kansas State Normal at Emporia, Kansas, in 1907 and took his bachelor's degree at Indiana University the following year, majoring in history. Continuing his work in Harvard University he took his master's degree from that institution in 1909, after which he served as an instructor in the Oklahoma Preparatory School, Tonkawa, Oklahoma, for two years. Then returning to college, this time to Wisconsin University, he put in two more years devoted to political science, receiving his Ph. D degree in 1913. Since that time he has served as professor of political science in the Oregon Agricultural College school of commerce. During all of these eleven years he has been active in student affairs, having served as chairman of the Board of Control of Student Activities for seven years and, within the last year, has been appointed dean of men. He is the first charter member of Oregon Alpha and has maintained an intimate relationship with the chapter from the time of its installation.

Dr Walter A. Jessup has a very considerable record behind him as an educator. His bachelor's degree was taken at Earlham College in 1903. After teaching for several years he returned to college, taking his doctor's degree at Columbia University in 1911. From his graduation until 1907 he served as superintendent of the Westfield, Indiana, schools, and the next two years in the same capacity at Madison, Indiana. Then in 1912 he became dean of the school of education of Indiana University and the next year went to the State University of Iowa as dean of the college of education, which post he held until made the president of the university in 1916. He is a member of the National Educational Association, National Society for Study of Education, Phi Delta Kappa, Indiana Society of Chicago, University Club of Chicago, and of the Triangle Club of Iowa City. He has also served as a member of the survey committees of the Cleveland and Los Angeles public school systems and was a member of the Iowa Liberty Loan Advisory Committee during the war. His writings include the book "Social Factors Affecting Supervision of Special Subjects." He does a great deal of speaking before educational associations in his and neighboring states. In addition to his membership in Sigma Phi Epsilon he is a member of Acacia Fraternity.

Charles W. McKenzie is a native of New Hampshire and a graduate of Dartmouth College with the class of 1920. His college course was somewhat interrupted by war activities but he nevertheless finished his course in four years and returned to school the next year, this time in Columbia University where he served as Dartmouth fellow in government. He took his master's degree in 1921 and received the appointment of William Jewett Tucker fellow at Columbia where he did further work for his Ph. D. degree. In 1922 he was appointed instructor in political science at Dartmouth for one year but the next year was given a three-year contract in which work he is still serving. While at Dartmouth he was prominent in various clubs and since his graduation he has at all times maintained the closest interest in the welfare of the Dartmouth chapter, at present being the alumni comptroller of the chapter and treasurer of the New Hampshire Alpha house corporation.

All three members of the committee being engaged in educational work they have been on vacations during the summer and their work is not yet organized. Chairman Dubach has indicated, however, that the first move made will be a questionnaire to be answered by all chapters. The Executive Committee of the fraternity has assured the scholarship committee of its willingness to back any proposals made for bettering scholarship even should strong disciplinary measures be required. Various national officers have expressed themselves as believing that the scholarship committee's activities will prove to be one of the most important of the many phases of our work and will greatly aid in curing one of our most serious deficiencies.

She doesn't smoke, she doesn't pet,
She doesn't drink, she doesn't bet,
At least she says she hasn't yet—

Brother of Grand President Becomes Honorary Member

OLLOWING the lead of two illustrious brothers, Frank H. Eastman, brother of Grand President W. H. Eastman, and Ben J. Eastman, both of New Hampshire Alpha, in the closing days of the last session became a member of New Hampshire Alpha of Sigma Phi Epsilon and, incidentally, a brother in whose accomplishments the fraternity can take no little pride. He was initiated as an honorary member, the work being conferred upon him by the Pennsylvania Epsilon chapter at Lehigh University.

A man of many honors, he states that he considers it his greatest honor to become a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon. And except for the fact that Sigma Phi Epsilon went into Dartmouth College some years after his graduation he no doubt would have been a member of the fraternity long before now.

Frank Eastman's talents are varied. In college he was a star in both scholastics and athletics. In the latter field he is remembered by the older sons of Dartmouth as a member of that most famous of all Dartmouth teams that christened Harvard's new stadium by administering to the Crimson a defeat of 11 to 0 and then the following Saturday used Brown for a door mat to the tune of 62 to 0. This was back in 1903. He took his bachelor of science degree in 1906 and immediately launched into the engineering field and has been following engineering and construction work through the intervening years.

It has been Frank Eastman's good fortune to be identified with some of the most noted construction works of our time. Right after graduation he stepped aside from engineering work long enough to serve as head coach for the Randolph Macon College football team and with it garnered the southern championship. As soon as that detail was out of the way he entered the employ of Jacobs & Davies who were the engineers for the McAdoo Tunnels in New York City. Later he shifted to the construction department and by virtue of hard work became assistant superintendent of the construction work, which job he held until the tunnels were completed. This was one of the great accomplishments in compressed air work in the earlier days.

Then Eastman joined forces with Holbrook, Cabot & Rolins on the construction of Dry Dock No. 4 of the Brooklyn Navy Yard. His work with this firm was devoted to pneumatic caisson construction. Later he joined the firm of Merrill Ruck Gaber Company where he was construction superintendent and engineer for several years until the death of a member of the firm caused its dissolution. While with this company he did a lot of deep foundation work for some of our New York skyscrapers, including the foundation for the government assay building. He had charge of many large sewer construction projects in Staten Island, Brooklyn and Coney Island, and also handled the development of several water supply reservoirs including that of the city of Cumberland, Md. He later spent some time in Canada on hydro-electric construction work.

In 1920 he joined the firm of Gannett, Seelye & Fleming with general offices at Harrisburg, Pa. He is at present a member of the firm and manager of the construction department.

Eastman is a member of the Thayer Society of Engineers and of the Engineers Club of Harrisburg, Pa. He has been a constant contributor to engineering journals, including the McGraw publications—perhaps the best known in this field. He is married and has one child.

He was preceded in the fraternity by his two younger brothers, Whitney H. and Ben J., in 1910 and 1913 respectively. Altogether they represent a trio that brings great credit to New Hampshire Alpha. "A fraternity is as strong as its alumni," has been the assertion of some. If that be a criterion the reader may take the Eastmans as a standard and pass his own judgment upon Sigma Phi Epsilon's chapter at historic Dartmouth College.

Story, Illinois Alpha, Becomes Department Head At Syracuse

By STANLEY J. FAIRWEATHER, Illinois Alpha

USSELL McCullough Story, Illinois Alpha, has accepted a position as head of the department of political science in the new school of citizenship and public affairs of Syracuse University which opens this fall. He has been in the department of political science in the University of Illinois since 1914.

Working under Dr. William E. Mosher of the staff of the national institute of public administration, who will be director of the school, Professor Story will be one of several prominent political scientists in charge of the new educational venture, a specially endowed school devoted to training men and women for careers in civic administration and to developing a student body prepared for the duties and practice of citizenship.

Professor Frederick M. Davenport, senator of the state of New York, will act as advisory counsel of the enterprise and Professor Floyd Allport of the University of North Carolina will be in charge of the school's department of social psychology.

Brother Story's departure from Illinois leaves vacant a membership on the board of directors of the Illini Publishing Company, the chairman of the Urbana city plan commission, and positions on numerous committees.

After graduation from Monmouth College in 1904, Story engaged in newspaper work for three years. He attended the graduate school of Harvard university for two years, the second of which was spent as a Francis Parkman fellow in historical research.

He became head of the department of history at Monmouth College after a short period teaching in Clark University, Worcester, Mass., and in 1914 came to the University of Illinois as an assistant in political science to complete work towards the degree of doctor of philosophy. In 1917 he was awarded the degree from Harvard.

For many years Professor Story, together with Professor J. A. Fairlie of the department of political science has been actively engaged in the establishment of the Illinois Municipal League, a union of cities which has grown to a membership of 180. Story was secretary of the league and founder and editor of the Illinois Municipal Review for the two years following 1921.

During the past few years he has interested himself in the Urbana city government, serving as an alderman from 1921 until the expiration of his term this year. During this time he was chairman of the city finance committee in charge of introducing the budget system, and was secretary of the city plan commission since it was first legally authorized in 1921.

Brother Story has been the faculty member and adviser of Sachem, men's junior honor society. He is also a member of Sigma Delta Chi and Pi Delta Epsilon fraternities.

During the World War, he worked in Russia as an official of the Y. M. C. A., and was known as director of intra-camp activities in the welfare program organized in the old Russian army. After the demobilization of the old army in the spring of 1918, he was appointed associate-general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Russia and Siberia, and was in charge of the work in the latter country. For his services during this time, the Czecho-Slovakian republic bestowed a medal of honor upon him.

A man will never admit that he is a poor judge of women till he is married, nor a poor judge of liquor till he is blind.—Cornell Widow.

Mazie: Oh, I haven't much of a shape either.—Colgate Banter.

The Traveler Tells Of The Trek

By BOB EDWARDS, Traveling Secretary

RAMBLING Eastward! On the last lap of the circle. After leaving Berkeley my next stop was Salt Lake City. Before we get to the city famous for its over-abundance of women, our train crossed the Salt Lake. Right through the lake goes the railroad built with many miles of trestle—a remarkable engineering feat. In Salt Lake is situated the University of Utah which is fast coming into its own. A survey of the school and its present fraternities gives one a very good impression of the school. Edward Callister, D. C. Alpha, late speaker of the House of Representatives of the State Assembly and a prominent lawyer, is located here and between him and his friends I was afforded ample opportunity to look over the school and the city. "Ned," as he is familiarly known to his friends, is the only Sig Ep in Salt Lake.

Laramie, Wyoming, where the University of Wyoming is situated and which is the adopted alma mater of Fred Parkes, Nebraska Alpha, and Walt Spears, Kansas Alpha, was next. This school is supported by oil royalties (it's close to Tea Pot Dome). Their enrollment is small yet but with a very progressive president, the building of many new buildings, notably the gymnasium, which is the largest and finest equipped west of Chicago. The influx of students from other states and the students of the state going there in ever increasing numbers promises to triple their enrollment in the next five years.

Going to Ft. Collins, the home of Colorado Gamma, from here one is forced to pass close by the Tea Pot Dome oil fields. I use "forced" advisedly, for was it not this scandal that "forced" the United States senators to answer "not guilty" on roll call where for many years the precedent has been to answer President, Aye, or No? Having no desire to be called to Washington because I had a little oil on my shoes, I attempted to hurry out of that country and rest my feet on safe soil at Ft. Collins. However, the train that carried me on my way was a descendent of Biblical times. It says somewhere within the covers of that book that the Lord created all creeping things.

Ft. Collins is a typical college town. The streets are wide and in the afternoons it is the principal occupation to get "the lady" and go "window shopping" and "promenading" down town. Pat Hurley, the godfather and alumni supervisor of the chapter, is still pursuing his profession of being the Kollege Klothier. With four men on the football team, some on the basketball, wrestling and boxing teams, with men on the publications they are certainly doing their share to make the name of "Sig Phi Ep" known in Colorado.

On to Boulder, the home of the mother chapter of the state, where we find the University of Colorado. The chapter here is building a fine home next door to the "Fiji" lodge. The house was started the day after I left. Whenever a fraternity starts to build there the other fraternities on the campus declare a "holiday of a night" from studies and social engagements and attempt to give the house a good send-off. This is known as "ground breaking night." It sometimes occurs that the house is christened before it is completed at these affairs. The contractor and builder of this place are both Sig Eps—Brothers Schefferman and Brown. Schefferman is a seventeen letter man at school. Beat that if you can. At the chapter house in a case about six feet high and five feet wide we see a jumbled collection of something. On closer inspection we find that this "junk" contains many cups, ribbons and medals that the chapter has won in various school activities. This is the largest collection that I have even seen. They certainly need the new home to put these in. Jack Salisbury of Conclave fame, one of those "break-right-down-and-confess-boys" is the "activity kid" of the campus. The sheiks of the chapter show one why it is that so many people in Colorado think "Sig Phi Ep" is the only national fraternity.

Denver! A taxi ride led out into the country—well not exactly—but out to the Denver University Campus where Colorado Beta reigns supreme. Only two fraternities run tables in their houses here and our chapter is one of them. The professional schools are located in the heart of the city while the campus is located at University Park, a twenty-minute ride from the center of town. In campus activities "they ain't got nuthin' else but!"

Dinner and a meeting at the Denver Athletic Club showed that the Denver Alumni are a peppy organization and are accomplishing things. One can go up and down the corridors of almost any office building in the city, drop into almost any office and ask for and find a Sig Ep. Our population in Denver is considerable and increasing every year from the four chapters in Colorado.

A street car ride led to Golden. Here at the Colorado School of Mines, a real "he-man" school, we have one of our latest. They may be new-born but they have learned to walk with an exceedingly firm step. They own their house which is a very attractive place. Upon entering the first thing one sees is the word "Salve" over the fireplace. This, I was told, means "Welcome." A welcome they surely give you. The fireplace is one of tradition and it burns from early fall to late spring without going out and woe to the freshman that should happen to let it burn low. Here is the original Ford touring top known as the "Covered Wagon" and "Four Wheels—No Brakes." Nevertheless it gets there.

Nebraska Alpha—the chapter of the Editor. They are trying to live that down, however, by going out and becoming THE chapter on the Nebraska campus. Bob Russell, former playmate in Washington, D. C., who is now coaching the freshman teams, was on hand. A bull session starts on the second floor mezzanine of their own home which they acquired last fall. Evidence of it is noted by the gang starting to sing—and I mean Sing. Someone has brought in some peanuts and popcorn and the "didja ever hear the one about" session starts. No session is over until 3 a. m. It ends with the husky singing of a fraternity song which is designed to wake up the house, if not the neighborhood. Skins—athletic trophies—are on the wall so thick that the wallpaper is hardly discernable. In the library downstairs the cups that grace the room are nearly as numerous as those at Colorado Alpha. Songs and serenades are very popular here. Tammany Hall of New York City has been moved to "Fly" Lewis' room. He is a flyweight in size but a power on the campus. There is one game that Bob Russell does not excel in—the game of bridge. Ye Traveling Sec had the honor of defeating him.

Manhattan—the home of the Kansas Agricultural College and Kansas Beta. "Groceries" was the first sign I saw as we pulled into the station, and they were the first think I wanted after an all day ride on a local train. After satisfying the inner man I wended my way to the "Greek metropolis on the Acropolis." I arrived at the foot and nearly turned back for there, towering over my head were fifty-seven steps up to the porch of the boys' house. It was a long hard pull to get to the top but once up there it was worth the effort. Here situated on top of the hill the house overlooks the city just as Kansas Beta overlooks the fraternity world at the college. Cigarettes are not sold officially in the state of Kansas and anticipating that, I carried "my own" but they are obtainable. This is a state of "House Mothers." The state law requires that all fraternity houses be equipped with matrons.

Kansas Gamma at the University of Kansas, the baby of our chapters, was next. Here we have the premier quartet of the fraternity. Harmony is their specialty and when they are accompanied by the Kansas Gamma orchestra they are the "stuff." At Lawrence they probably have the most highly developed college politics of any college in the country. There are two parties, the Black Mask and Apachamache. On election days the rivalry becomes intense. Considerable money is spent in posters and tags for the various candidates. The boys are moving into a larger house this fall and it will not be long before they are in a place of their own. At Lawrence the dance floor is built on springs and sways with the dancers. It is quite an agreeable sensation to dance on such a floor.

Kansas Alpha and Baker University at Baldwin are just a short distance from Kansas Gamma and the boys visit back and forth considerably. The town around the college is rather small and, because of college regulations prohibiting dancing, hikes and picnics are the favorite pastimes. It was spring and quite a number of the boys had heard the call and "hung" their pins.

Kansas City—the home of Tommy Neal, the alumni supervisor of Kansas Alpha, Paul Koontz, Grand Marshal, and a live alumni association, was next. Luncheon with the association and a sight-seeing trip with Neal and Koontz and away to Des Moines.

Here the Inter-Fraternity Alumni Association was having its annual banquet and who should be in charge of the entertainment and also toastmaster than our own "Dutch" Schmidt. Needless to say, it was a fine affair with the "Dutchess" filling in with her wonderful dances. Not because of any inside strings but on merit, our association here won the bronze monkey for the best turnout. We not only had the largest delegation of any of the fraternities, but we also had the highest percentage of attendance.

At Iowa Alpha the boys have moved in off of the farm and are now in their own home a block from the campus. Here the boys do not smoke in the house, but I was duly initiated into the Fireroom Gang. Smoking is permitted around the furnace and the neophyte must furnish the cigarettes (any brand) and after the ceremonies his name is duly inscribed on the covering of the furnace.

Then came Missouri Alpha. Back again! I was certainly glad to be able to stop off a couple of days here on my way south and renew friendships. The spring elections were about to come off and Anderson from the house was running for student president, the greatest honor on the campus. I later learned that he made it in fine style. Congratulations, Andy! Maybe you'll need my Tux another night now. What?

At Arkansas Alpha a return visit found the house filled with the same pep and the gang grabbing off everything that was to be had. They should have a wonderful year this year.

At Memphis we have a live wire gang of about thirty-five Sig Eps from a half dozen chapters. It was due to the efforts of Beverly Hart, Jr., Virginia Eta, now an erstwhile cotton broker, that this gang was gotten together on April 10th. A meeting at the University Club, of which N. H. Sayford, Pennsylvania Epsilon, is president, was a huge success. Brother Sayford was also elected president of this embryo alumni chapter, with F. A. Mantell, New York Beta, vice president. Tennessee Alpha, with nine representatives at the meeting, put over one of their number, J. W. Wilson, for the working job, secretary-treasurer. Now, I ask you, does that show fraternal spirit? No account would be complete without the mention of Ben Doty, Virginia Eta, automobile salesman and chauffeur for visiting brothers, and Curtis McGown, who owns the Cotton Exchange but finds time to read the JOURNAL from cover to cover. He wants to know why they never print his "stuff" in the JOURNAL. Ask the Editor.

Birmingham, the northern city in southern territory. Here we find quite a few Sig Eps from chapters as far north as Vermont and as far south as the chapter in the state at Auburn. Henry J. Porter, Virginia Theta at the old Virginia Military Institute, who runs the finest equipped men's furnishing establishment in the South, is gathering together the Sig Eps and a strong organization in Birmingham is promised. He is receiving co-operation from James C. Hatcher, D. C. Alpha, James W. Moore and Clifton Abbott, of Alabama Alpha.

Alabama Alpha at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, was next. The chapter, accompanied by the porter from the house,, were at the train when I blew in. Now Auburn is a small place with "Main Street" made up of eating places, the drug store and the postoffice, but there is certainly a lot of life around the place during the college session. There is a custom on the campus of the various fraternities of "feeding" the other fraternity men. Every so often some fraternity that finds its treasury overloaded will break out with several long tables on the lawn filled with southern fried chicken and all the accessories. Here the men mill around and a spirit of good will is promoted between the fraternities on the campus. The tennis matches were on when I was there and to keep up my record of never seeing a Sig Ep team lose, our boys walked right through the semi-finals and were considered the favorites for the championship. The chapter is now under the Sigma Phi Epsilon Plan of Finance and are on the way toward a new home in the near future.

At Georgia Alpha I completed a hurried visit made just before Christmas. Georgia Tech is quite the engineering school of the south and here we have located a chapter that is there. Atlanta is noted for quite a few things and I was privileged to enjoy most of them. That tall, long, lean, lanky Conclave delegate, Web Brown, is still hanging around and will be able to pay ye Traveling Sec that box of cigars that he has already lost (or have he?). They are moving into a new home this fall.

The University of Florida is located in that part of Florida that natives tell you "You ought to see the other part." Nevertheless after one gets to Gainesville he doesn't want to leave for they are royal entertainers. Here is located a fine bunch of fellows under the name Sigma Epsilon, hand picked by Brother James Day, Missouri Alpha, and the sponsor of Oklahoma Alpha. They were organized for the express purpose of petitioning Sigma Phi Epsilon. They are very strong on their campus as the fact that the only two men running for student president (these men were put up by organizations outside of the group) were both members of Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Back Home Again! After making a short stop at each of the North Carolina chapters that I had visited previously, I arrived in Richmond. Tired? Yes. I never wanted to see another railroad train again. It had been a strenuous trip and to settle down and lead a regular life again was all that I desired. I certainly was well received at all the chapters and enjoyed my stay at each immensely. It may have been brief but there are only so many days to make the trip in and one must move on.

On my trip after the Conclave all the delegates wished to be remembered to everyone else and if you were a delegate, please note. The cry now seems to be "Let's all meet again at the 1926 Conclave." That suits me.

Edwards, Haldeman & Company Added To Official Jewelers

By action of the Executive Committee a fourth official jeweler to the fraternity has been created in the appointment of Edwards, Haldeman & Company of Detroit and representatives of this company are now calling upon chapters with the sanction of the grand officers.

For more than two years our official jewelers had been limited to three, Hoover & Smith Company, L. C. Balfour Company and Burr, Patterson & Company. With the addition of a fourth jeweler it is believed the maximum of service to the fraternity will be had as well as the benefit of sales commissions to the fraternity. A certain percentage of every sale by official jewelers accrues to the Grand Chapter. No commissions are received from sales of non-official houses, and chapters, by action of Conclaves, are under mandate to buy fraternity jewelry only from the four official jewelers mentioned above. Every member should inform himself as to what houses officially serve the fraternity.

There once was a woman called Mrs.
Who said, "I don't know what a Krs.,
But a fellow in haste
Put his arm around her waist
And quietly answered, "Why thrs."

EXCOGITATIONS BY ED

This department makes its first appearance with this issue providing a more nearly unrestricted outlet for the thoughts and ideas that occur to one engaged in fraternity work than Ye Ed has heretofore had. The department will have a dual purpose. In the first place I hope there will be something of interest in it for those interested in fraternity work. In the next place, I want to use it to offer many suggestions, some criticism and not a few general observations in a purely informal matter. In other words, I want to "get off my chest"—my "mental chest" please note—many of the ideas with which my mental processes become congested during the course of the day to day work in behalf of the fraternity.

If there is anything against which I rebel it is to have some one or some thing cramp my style—to use a current figure. The outlet for personal expression within the JOURNAL has for quite some time—indeed, since I have got into the fraternity work—has very much cramped my style. Not in a literary sense, understand, but purely in the freedom of expression of a thousand and one ideas that occurs to one while in the course of his work. Therefore, this new department—this "colyum," if you will—makes its appearance and if it serves its present design it will become an informal clearing house for the ideas that are constantly suggested to me, either directly or indirectly, by the many members with whom I am in correspondence.

I believe I must enjoy as interesting a correspondence as any member within our fraternity. Scores upon scores of letters come to my desk from members in all parts of the country. Some, it is true, merely want to cuss me because their writer has not yet received the last issue of the JOURNAL and these I must give a form answer to the effect that they should send their present correct address to the Grand Secretary. Nine times out of ten we find that they have changed their address without notifying the fraternity and as every one knows, second class matter, under which the JOURNAL classification falls, will not be forwarded. These letters are not so interesting. Nor are those necessary ones that tell of a change of chapter officers, the correction of directory data and the like. But I am constantly getting letters from wide-awake, intelligent and interesting personalities in all parts of the country that afford me no end of pleasure and serve to put me intimately in touch with fraternity conditions at large. It is from my correspondence chiefly that I run across material for the JOURNAL. So seldom is an article contributed voluntarily that it is a shock to my nervous system to receive one. I should very much like to constantly suffer such shocks for it would very much lighten my work, but I have few hopes of it. As it is I shall continue to follow leads suggested in letters from our widespread membership—mostly from alumni, by the way—and it may be that the volume of material will continue to increase. That is my hope for, in order to issue a better quality of JOURNAL, a wider range of material from which to choose must be had.

What a genius for organization could mean to a fraternity was recently brought vividly to my mind when Whit Eastman, our Grand President, sent me a copy of what he calls the "Seventh Report" of the Dartmouth College Class of 1910. Whit has for years been secretary of the "Titanic Tenth," as the Class of 1910 call themselves. Taking over the job when the membership was pretty well lost and the lines of communication badly broken, by dint of persistent correspondence he has aroused the interest of practically every one of his classmates which number, I presume, between three and four hundred. Their report compiled by Whit is some 215 pages long and sets forth a letter from practically every member of the class ranging in length from 500 to 2,000 words.

Just think what that means. To get so large a number of classmates in that intimacy of contact fourteen years after they have scattered to the four winds represents a considerable feat of organization. We may marvel at it because there are few persons who would have the infinite patience to keep writing, inquiring and locating addresses as Eastman has done. Genius, they say, is the capacity for taking infinite pains. So here and now I pronounce our chief executive to be genius for organization.

This has an application to fraternity work. If one alumnus of each chapter in our fraternity should take it upon himself to locate every alumnus of his chapter and keep at it until all were heard from and periodical reports could be made up, think what it would mean to that chapter! Chapter reunions would cease to be matters of doubt as to attendance. There would be an interest in the fraternity and its membership that would unite them solidly and never allow their interest to lag. But for lack of that one alumnus who will undertake the job with all of its discouragements and slow results most chapters are letting their alumni get away from them. Every one knows that persistent work could unite the members of any chapter. I wonder how many chapters we have that do not have within their numbers some one man who could and would undertake this task with the satisfaction of a work well done as his only reward?

Last year there was distributed to all chapters copies of what we chose to call "Standardized Procedure." For the benefit of those alumni who have been unable to examine the copy possessed by their active chapter it might be explained that "Standardized Procedure" is a loose leaf manual of fraternity operation carrying valuable suggestions in all different phases of the work. Each active chapter is in possession of a copy of this work as a means of determining fraternity policies and securing and preserving "short cuts" and better methods of performing fraternity work.

With a new year starting this is the appropriate time for each chapter to get out its copy of "Standardized Procedure" and give it a thorough study. Is rushing your first problem? Look it up in S. P.. Are you weak on pledge talks? Consult S. P. Are you in doubt about what you should do in regard to this or that of fraternity work? Then remember S. P. In fact, it cannot be too strongly urged that S. P. be given a painstaking study in the first days of the session and be made the guide to all chapter problems. Incidentally, if anyone has any ideas he thinks should be found in S. P. let him carefully write them up and forward to the Grand Secretary that they may be distributed to the chapters to be included in this loose leaf work.

Somewhat on the same line, let me suggest that the readers of this department consult the third paragraph of page 228 of the May, 1924, issue of the JOURNAL and send the Grand Secretary a solution of the problem there stated. Here is a good way to become famous—within fraternity ranks, at least.

A not infrequently heard expression of opinion is that such and such a person is not the "type" of the fraternity with which he is affiliated. We have also heard it charged that each fraternity has a national "type." I suppose we can take some stock in the matter of a chapter "type" for like begets like and men of particular traits of character are drawn to those of their kind. My observation has been, however, that over a period of six or eight years the so-called "type" of a chapter changes at least once. With virtually a complete change of membership every four years the infusion of "new blood" is certain to tell. In some one year perhaps an unusually large number of freshmen will be pledged who within one, two or three years after their advent may bring to bear a tremendous influence upon the character of the chapter, completely changing its "type." The relaxation or the strengthening of disciplinary measures may in a year or so of time work a decided change in the chapter personnel.

That there is a national "type" of any fraternity I have never been willing to admit. Chapters of national fraternities are so segregated and isolated from each other that one bears little impress upon another except to that negligible extent that they transfer members. Chapters of any fraternity show the impress of their local college influences to a certain extent and those same college influences differ widely as the result of administrative policies, physical conditions and other causes.

At the same time there is among members of a national fraternity, if I may judge solely from knowledge of our own fraternity, a certain spiritual likeness of "type"—a kinship, so to speak—that is quite evident. Look over a Conclave assembly. It is heterogeneity incarnate if outward appearances are any index. But let this assembly, as delegates, enter the Conclave room to deliberate upon fraternity matters and there is a striking unity among them. It is true that they may differ widely in opinions—just as there are differences in opinion in any chapter—but there is this to be said: there is something in fraternity experience that brings on the part of all members a like approach to any problem. One develops some of that same philosophy as applied to the fraternity that we find in the maxim of the stage, "The show must go on." The good of the fraternity is the undebatable and accepted end of all deliberations. To him who suggests there is nothing unusual about this I would point out that there are not many associations of people wherein there are wide differences of opinion that maintain the allegiance of defeated minorities. The fraternity is bigger than individuals or any group of individuals and this fact is so unquestionably accepted that minorities in good grace accept the will of the majority. Where, may I ask, is there a better school of democracy than in an institution that teaches this wholesome principle—so widely accepted in the abstract yet so abused in practice?

The sincerity of other members is in a Conclave accepted as in no other body I have observed in action. It is a distinct matter of kinship to be remarked in our observation. There is the oneness of mind incident to ritualistic usage within the Conclave; the acceptance of ritualistic principle as the premises of many an argument that savors of the unity of "type." Above all there is an understanding of and sympathy with each other's living conditions, problems, victories, discouragements and other incidents that reaches far beyond the kinship of college camaraderie. I believe it to be a species of "type" that has grown out of the impress of fraternity house life, guided and directed by the wholesome influence of a beautiful ritual and that invisible entity which makes of the chapter a unit of the fraternity rather than a boarding house.

To this extent there is a "type." But this is not the meaning of the world at large superficially appraising the men of different fraternities. There is no fraternity that runs exclusively to toughs or to angels. And I suppose there is no fraternity but that has within its membership representatives of both of these classes. The "type" that we are striving to secure as the predominant group in each chapter has no other specification than that of clean cut, wholesome manhood having a sound mind in a sound body. We will compromise on the soundness of body but not upon the soundness of mind.

A striking percentage of our members served in the World War. The fraternity does not have information as to how many, but when it is remembered that there are very few of our members who, at the time of the war, so far as age is concerned, were not eligible, it may well be inferred that the greater portion of the fraternity served in the big fracas. In my own chapter more than ninety per cent of the members did time with Uncle Samuel.

But that is neither here nor there. What I started out to say is that because we have so many members with army experience the tales Leonard Nason of Vermont Alpha has been writing in Adventure will have an unusual appeal. Practically all of his stories are laid in army life and depict some feature of the service as he himself experienced it while in the army. He is making for himself a splendid reputation in this field. No one in the fictional field has excelled his war stories and his writing this winter will become increasingly well known to the fraternity. Elsewhere in this issue of the JOURNAL may be found mention of his latest yarn published by Adventure.

A new field for fraternities is going to be opened—a field concerning which no fraternity has, as yet, given attention. Colleges and universities throughout the country have increased their enrollments amazingly during the last five years and there is no slacking of interest. That they will continue to increase I do not doubt, but I believe we are going to see a very wide development of the city college idea as it is now being worked out in Michigan where some half dozen of Michigan's larger cities have created city colleges.

These schools are in reality nothing more than a four-year continuation of high school. Supported by public funds, usually conducted in connection with a high school, they offer the same type of schooling as does the high school except of college grade. With the increase in numbers of students desiring a college education, city colleges will, I believe, become a generally accepted institution and a solution of the problem that now faces college executives in handling such large numbers.

The city college is a logical thing. Run in connection with the high school a portion of the overhead expense may be charged to the high school, departmental teachers may spread their work over both high school and college classes and, of greater importance, the expense of the student leaving home and maintaining himself in a distant city is eliminated. Of course, there will always be a sufficient number who will prefer, for various reasons, to attend the distant college. But the city school will become a boon to the student without means.

There is not the same need for a fraternity on the part of the city college student as there is on the part of the student living away from home and subjected to entirely different living conditions. Yet I look for fraternities to enter the city college field. There will be plenty of good fraternity material and there will be plenty of students who will want to join a fraternity. Chapter houses may be an unheard of thing in these schools, yet there have been and are many strong chapters that do not have a chapter house. The quality of the personnel may be as high as the highest without a chapter house. It will be interesting to watch the growth of the city college plan and it will likewise be of interest to fraternity people to note the growth of fraternities in these new institutions.

Discussing the relative merits of particular fraternities by members of those fraternities is, generally speaking, very bad form. It would be in about equal taste for two people to compare the merits of their two families. Fraternity comparisons are not practicably possible for there is no measurement of human personality whereby each member can be indexed and the index of the whole arrayed against the index of members of another fraternity.

Bad form as are such comparisons, however, I recently knowingly indulged in such a breach of etiquette with a member of one of the oldest and largest fraternities. My friend, whom I shall call Jones because that is not his name, had given me to understand that because of its tender years our fraternity, in his estimation, was a weakling in the field. Of course, he assured me, he didn't pretend to know much about it. Since he got out of college he hadn't paid much attention to fraternities; in fact, there was nothing to interest him in the bunch of kids that came in afterwards. Occasionally, he said, he looked up some of the alumni of his fraternity when he went to the town in which the college was located, but as far as his connection with the chapter was concerned he hadn't been in the house for four or five years and hadn't known any of the members for that long.

"And yet upon a confession of that kind can you still insist that your fraternity is a stronger institution than mine?" I asked him. "Here we are: two average members. We came from the same college, attended at the same time, belonged to fraternities at the same time. You admit that your fraternity has had no more hold upon you than your boarding house would have had if you had lived at one. You have, by your own confession, no tie to the fraternity as an institution. On the other hand my fraternity has held my interest from the day I graduated. I have known every man in the chapter every year. I have been familiar with its record. I have expended not a little effort in its behalf during the time I have been out of college. My fraternity means something to me; it has a firm hold upon my allegiance and my affection. I am proud of it. It has been able to do for me something that yours could not do for you; it has held my interest. For that reason I think I am entitled to say that my fraternity is a stronger institution than yours."

He protested that this was not a fair comparison—that I was more interested than the average in fraternity affairs, but he did not admit that he had fellow alumni more interested than he. I pointed out to him that I knew of no alumnus of my fraternity who had so little interest in his fraternity as he. I told him what various members were doing for my chapter and the interest displayed in all its affairs. We parted without him conceding my point but I know in my own heart that he knows the truth of my claims and he knows that Sigma Phi Epsilon can tug at the heart-strings of its membership as hard as can any fraternity. And after all, what is the strength of a fraternal organization other than the appeal which the organization has for its individual members?

Elsewhere in this issue will be found mention of the newly inaugurated activity on the part of the New York City Alumni chapter in serving as an employment agency for Sig Eps. Too much credit for this worthy work cannot be given the New York brothers who are plowing new ground in a field of activity that, I feel confident, will eventually be one of the important functions of our fraternity.

No college student has a bigger problem to face than that of getting himself a satisfactory job after he has graduated. His whole activity has been so remote from business affairs that he is lost insofar as a knowledge of where to turn for gainful employment is concerned. And yet, in most cases, the college graduate would make a very valuable employe in the proper place while there are untold numbers of employers looking for this type of men. Putting the two in touch with each other is going to be a very valuable work from more angles than one.

Many times during the last two or three years I have mentioned either by word of mouth or by articles in the JOURNAL the possibilities in such work. It has appealed to me as a field of activity that will interest alumni organizations more than any other aside from purely social activities. No alumnus affiliated with an alumni chapter or association need longer ask "What can we do?" New York alumni have answered that question and merit the appreciation and gratitude of the fraternity at large.

The eyes of all Sig Eps will be upon the New York men in their work. It represents a big undertaking. If it is to be really successful the sympathetic interest in the effort of all New York Sig Eps will be required which, in turn, bespeaks a good, cohesive organization. No one man can make a success of the work. All of the members of the chapter will have to maintain a constant inquiry for jobs; they will have to keep the work constantly in mind. If they succeed in doing this no one need inquire, "What sort of an alumni chapter do we have in New York City?" He will know that any group of men that can make a success of the work about to be undertaken is a splendid organization; that it is made up of men with altruism and the qualities of self-effacement representing the highest type of citizens, to say nothing of fraternity men. The new movement is the product of idealism, not selfish interest, and it is only to idealistic ventures that men will rally with the zeal that bespeaks success.

Whether or not the efficiency of the fraternity is increasing—and I think it is, markedly—it is not open to dispute that the interest of the membership is increasing. The Grand Secretary will testify to that fact upon the basis of his correspondence. I, too, can give evidence of the fact. When I took up the work of editing the JOURNAL less than three years ago there was a seeming apathy to fraternity affairs that was discouraging in the extreme. I have seen that interest grow during the intervening time until at the present I can say that I consider the spirit of the membership at large as splendid in every respect.

I will not say that I think the cooperation rendered either the office of the Grand Secretary or the Editor is satisfactory as yet. It is not. For example, about half of the chapters failed to submit their annual activities list for publication in this issue of the JOURNAL despite the fact that a letter of explicit instruction was sent to each chapter as well as notification given in the last issue of the JOURNAL. With our publication date September 15th, no less than a half dozen chapters have sent in their activities list during the first week in September (at which time these words are being written) with all other activities already in type and paged up. Incidentally, if you at times wonder why the JOURNAL is usually late let me suggest that like neglect on the part of individuals and chapters holds up nearly every issue.

But on the other hand there are a multitude of brothers whose cooperation with the JOURNAL is splendid in every respect. Needless to say they have the gratitude of the Editor. Some of our chapters render equally good cooperation. And here is a feature worthy of a little thought: there are certain chapters who not only follow instructions explicitly and comply promptly with occasional requests but they do it year in and year out despite the fact that the membership has completely turned over. Brother Phillips confirms me in this observation. I leave it to the reader to say whether or not these chapters have developed system; whether in their business-like methods they are an organization or a group.

I suppose it will all work out in the long run. Somewhere there is a formula that, with the exercise of reasonable effort, will bring systematic operation to all chapters. But I don't expect to ever see it in my time

SIG EPICS

A SIGMA XI and his master's degree in chemistry were enough honors for one member in one year. These represent the fruit of Harold Bedell's work during the past year at the University of Nebraska. In addition he has been elected by University of Iowa authorities to serve as an assistant in chemistry during this session. At the same time he will continue his work in chemistry working for a doctor's degree. Bedell graduated in geology. After following this work a year he taught for one year and then decided to take up chemistry. For the past two years he has been engaged in such work at the University of Nebraska, the last year assisting in chemistry laboratories.

ANOTHER BEDELL is doing well a work of a vastly different nature. Dwight Bedell, younger brother of Harold Bedell, is the general secretary of the Alpha Kappa Psi Fraternity with offices in Indianapolis, Ind. He occupies in the Alpha Kappa Psi Fraternity, which is devoted to the interests of commercial students, the same position as that of the Grand Secretary in this fraternity. In addition he edits the Alpha Kappa Psi Diary, a most creditable fraternity publication. His organization now has thirty-nine chapters.

THE GRAND PRESIDENT has ideas on fraternity subjects as well as all others. Recently he proved that he had one of the best ideas for the improvement of the F. L. Barbour jewelry service of the multitude of fraternity people throughout the country who entered Balfour's suggestion contest. Prizes were offered for the best ideas for improving the Balfour service to fraternities. Eastman won the second award upon a code of ethics to govern the trade practices and policies of the Balfour house. He is now the possessor of a pearl and diamond badge given in appreciation of the value of his suggestions.

PAUL C. THORNILLY, Kansas Alpha, in a letter to the editor, tells his own story: "Several things have happened to me since I last heard from you. First, I was elected principal and coach of Kimball County High School and, the most important, I became very tired of restaurant grub and took a central Nebraska girl for wife, Miss Elsie Jones of Central City. Last, but not least, I realized my JOURNAL dues were out and I am enclosing three dollars for dues for the ensuing year. The last three issues were the best I've seen since I've been in the fraternity." Brother Thornilly last year was the coach at Central College at Central City, Nebr.

VICTOR D. WERNER, Wisconsin Alpha, '22, has embarked upon a lawyer's career at Green Bay, Wis., where he has offices in suite 150 Bellin Building. Werner entered the fraternity when a student at Lawrence College at Appleton, Wis., from which he took his A. B. degree. He later transferred to the University of Wisconsin at Madison where he took his LL. B. degree.

PROOF AT LAST that Sig Epics are read! In the last issue an item was devoted to Bill Beck, Kansas Alpha, our genial jewelry salesman. The editor desired to get in communication with Bill but did not know his address.

Mention was made of the fact with the request that if Bill should read that item he should write the editor. After a period of suspense the expected answer came. Bill had noticed the high sign at some fraternity house down south and reported his address with a query as to what was wanted. Service, that.

EDWARD C. GRUEN, Georgia Alpha, has recently become associated with the firm of Percival G. Bixby & Co., accountants and auditors, with offices in the Marine Trust Building, Buffalo, N. Y. Brother Gruen, who is a certified public accountant in New York and Georgia and also a mechanical engineer, having graduated from the Cornell University engineering school, was until recently a member of the Committee on Appeals and Review, Bureau of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C. His new work will include federal and other tax matters together with industrial engineering and general accounting.

FRANKLIN C. CAPPON, Michigan Alpha, has added another honor to his long list already attained. Just before the close of the college year Cappan was awarded by University of Michigan authorities the conference medal based upon scholarship, athletics and personality. Each year one man in each of the "Big Ten" universities is awarded such a medal. Last year's recipient was the noted Goebal, captain of the 1922 Michicag football team. Cappon will be remembered as a member of the All-American football team of 1920 and mentioned for the honor the two succeeding years. He has been a member of the All-Sig Ep team of 1922 and last year made the selection of an All-Sig Ep team. He coached the Luther College football team last fall to which work he will return this year. He took his degree at the end of the second semester last year after having devoted the first semseter to coaching.

ALBERT A. STROMWALL, Minnesota Alpha, is entitled to much of the credit for Minnesota Alpha's two baseball championships at the University of Minnesota. Stromwell, who himself pitched the chapter team to victory in 1923 and 1924, has for two years been on the coaching staff of the University of Minnesota baseball team. His work is with the Gopher pitchers exclusively. While pitching for his chapter team he has suffered no defeat in the two years. In addition to baseball he has done good work for the chapter in bowling and basketball competition.

SWEET TEETH have been catered to by Ralph L. Mutz, Iowa Beta, for some years now. For a considerable time he was with the Hutchinson Candy Company of Des Moines, Ia., producing fancy confections and aided in building a fine business for that company. On January 1st, last, he resigned from his Des Moines connection to join the Williamson Candy Company, 50 Washington St., Brooklyn, N. Y., manufacturers of the noted "Oh Henry!" brand of candies. In his work as sales manager he supervises the distribution of the 600,000 bars of candy produced daily by the Williamson company. Between 600 and 700 people are employed by the company which is growing like the "proverbial weed," to quote Brother Mutz. Between commanding the forces calling on jobbers and the promotion work of "crews" working with retailers through jobbers he has his hands full, being the officer in authority over all sales operations out of Brooklyn, the larger of the two houses owned by the Williamson company. At Des Moines he was secretary of the Des Moines Alumni Chapter and a dependable fraternity worker. Much interested in fraternity affairs he will no doubt lend his talents to the New York City Alumni Chapter.

TEUNIS J. WYERS, Washington Beta, spent the summer at Craig, Alaska,—the land of God, fish and promise, so he says—watching a fish trap, shooting deer and getting paid for having a glorious time. Wyers, who was Washington Beta's representative at the Columbus Conclave, finished his academic work last spring although, in order to run another year on Washington's track team he did not take his degree. He will leave with a law degree next spring, barring scholastic debacles. Although as far away as Alaska, Wyers served as a strategist in charge of rushing operations during the summer by means of a voluminous correspondence.

MINNESOTA ALPHA, although now the owner of a very comfortable chapter house, is not content and has plans afoot for building a new home that shall be in keeping with the standard of that chapter on the Minnesota campus. Unless something goes awry that chapter will be in its new home at the beginning of school in 1925. Plans call for an English type home with sleeping accommodations for forty-six men, study for members in town, shower and locker room in the basement and a grouping of first floor rooms making it unnecessary to remove to some down town hotel for social functions. The alumni board of the chapter, of course, is handling the plans.

WALTER E. BARTON, D. C. Alpha, our fraternity income tax authority whose work was mentioned at some length in the May issue of the JOURNAL has recently changed offices. Withdrawing from his association with Judge Timothy T. Ansberry he has opened a law office in the Investment Building, Washington, D. C., where he will continue to practice before the departments and federal courts, giving special attention to federal taxation matters. He will be remembered as the co-author of Barton & Browning's work "Federal Income Tax Laws."

ARTHUR W. WALKER, never otherwise known than "Tillie" Walker in Nebraska Alpha circles, has recently returned from California to Omaha, Nebraska, and there secured a position with the Nebraska Power Company in the engineering department. He took his degree in engineering from the University of Nebraska in 1922. In the employ of the same company are two other Sig Eps, Krug, Nebraska Alpha, and Swanson, Iowa Beta. Another Sig Ep, Paul Anderson, Iowa Beta, is a construction engineer with an affiliated company, the Phoenix Utilities Company, which is building a new power plant unit for the Nebraska Power Company. Walker claims 706 No. 49th Street as his Omaha address.

ANOTHER BROTHER from Nebraska Alpha to recently locate in Omaha is J. W. Hussey who is associated with Baldrige, Dorsey & Baldrige, attorneys with offices in the Omaha National Bank Building. With the same company is Walter Johnson, Nebraska Alpha, who is the nominee of the republican party for the legislature with his election almost certain. Omaha is acquiring a very considerable number of Sig Ep lawyers.

EDITORIALS

One of the popular indoor sports of recent years has been the attack by a certain class of unimaginative individuals upon colleges and instructors given to teaching "unorthodox" economic and social laws. In the opinion of these people students must be "protected" from dangerous ideas. Innocent minds must not be entrapped by the guileful logic of the "radicals" and the "parlor Bolsheviks." They must be shielded from all thought that does not tally with the school professed by these self-appointed custodians of the nation's thought processes.

We hold no brief for the advance agents of new thought. But it is beyond understanding that there should be an attempt to dictate what shall and what shall not be taught in our colleges by other than educational authorities. We call this a democracy. We maintain that within our country there is to be permitted free expression of opinion—the freedom of speech. But if there is freedom in the expression of opinion it should be possible to teach that opinion in colleges in any instance where faculties consider it sufficiently informative and stimulating to accord it a place in the curriculum.

There are all too many people for the good of civilization who are afraid of new ideas. Progress, in their view, is a condition to be deplored. The desirable things of life are those of the present and of the past. A new thought, a departure from an established custom, is to be viewed with horror. Furthermore, it is to be suppressed so that it may not contaminate the world's thought.

What internal writhing, what mental anguish, these prophets of reaction must suffer as they watch the march of civilization day by day, the old giving place to the new and the superstitious beliefs of the past surrendering to the compelling proof of science! What a feeling of despair they must experience in their attempt to swim against the relentless tide of progress that bears affairs onward! Appreciating their sense of utter helplessness perhaps we can understand their frantic effort to use any means in suppressing the processes that are working this change. They hate progress simply because it means change and they doubt their ability to accommodate themselves to new conditions. A prey to such fears they are willing to violate the rules of life's game in an attempt to prevent loss of their established position. They are willing to make a mockery of the Constitutional privilege of freedom of speech and its corrolary, freedom in the selection of college curricula.

Had these college censors more imagination they would realize the ultimate uselessness of their efforts. A broader view would convince them that erroneous doctrines will not stand the test of logic and comparison with established truth and will influence but few. And they would know that truth cannot be ultimately suppressed by resort to deception, coercion or inquisition. By interference they may delay the acceptance of truth but theirs is but a temporary victory at best.

Incidentally, it is not out of place to ask ourselves the old question, What is the function of the college? There are a multitude of people who are sincere in answering that it is solely a process for fitting the student into our economic scheme. And with a livelihood so precarious it is perhaps useless to attempt to counter this view. The problem of existence presses so heavily upon the shoulders of most people that they cannot overlook its weight.

There are others who look upon education with a sounder view but who see the chief value in the acquisition of facts—the accumulation of formulated knowledge. But is this not a view shot with danger? If the accumulation of knowledge is our end, where is there to be progress? Have we allowed for the most necessary activities of discovering new truths? Untaught in methods of approach, schooled only in the acquisitive function of storing away facts, are we not placing a handicap upon the future?

Surely all that is taught is not truth. Science is in the making. Some of it is being made rapidly; other phases are lagging pitifully—notably the social sciences. A constant change is in process, a sorting, discarding, revising of our classified learning. Think of the waste in making of the mind merely a temporary storage tank for this material which is in process of revision.

The value of education, and the colleges in particular, is in evolving methods of approach to problems. In this process there will be as an incident the assimilation of classified knowledge but that knowledge will serve only to bridge a chasm of doubt. It is necessary that we shall build from established truth. But who knows what is truth? Only by viewing all things with doubt as to its validity until intelligence is satisfied that it accords with truth can we be certain we are proceeding upon a reasonably well-founded premise. Likewise only by considering all possible facts, all conceivable doctrines and all schools of thought can we feel that we are giving the quest for truth that to which it is entitled.

Glenn Frank, one of the most brilliant of contemporary writers and editors, has made the statement that the college or university of today is essentially a retreat in which for four or more years the student may withdraw from the world of every day affairs and "breathe the air of freedom, achieve emancipation from the obsolete dogmas, the unworthy loyalties, the irrational inhibitions, the tribal conformities, and the cowardly cautions that crush and kill the uneducated mind."

That the college should serve as such a function is not open to dispute. But to what extent does it? To what extent do elected regents and trustees place limitations upon curricula? To what extent do popular-consumption newspapers and unlearned politicians work an influence upon college courses?

Religious dogmas, political theories, social concepts, are all established totem poles in most minds. Inquiry as to their validity—even that they may be accepted upon understanding rather than on the faith accorded tradition—is widely considered as irreverent. The things that are, it seems, are the things that should be. That institutions come to us out of the past is argument that they should continue unchallenged into the future.

But slavery came out of the past as did the Inquisition, the rule of despots, wars of conquest and other crimes against the rights of man. As surely as wisdom has ended these incidents will it likewise end many a tradition and dogma and "rid men's brains of the ancestral ghosts that haunt them." If freedom will be given the investigation and teaching of the social sciences—freedom comparable with that accorded the natural sciences—our mental shackles will be rapidly stricken from us. To this end faculties must have a freer rein. There must be less meddling with the colleges on the part of those not in authority over colleges. And it would be of great benefit if all of us suffered less hysteria in contemplating departure from the beaten path.

With the ALUMNI

NEW YORK CITY ALUMNI CHAPTER

THE members of the New York City Alumni Chapter have, for the most part, been taking a vacation for the summer months and have, therefore, done very little work for either themselves or for their fraternity. A few of us have, however, been attending the Wednesday noon luncheons, and have been pleased to see so many new men from out of town who have remembered that we have luncheon every Wednesday noon together. We have found it a great place to spend an hour or two, mostly two, chatting, eating and listening to some of our great humorist story tellers, who are always on hand with a new one. I speak of Vern Foley, Joe Condermann, William C. Hoople. There are a great many other alumni brothers who could be placed in this class, but who are not very regular in attendance. We should like to see more of them.

During the summer months the alumni chapter was notified of the marriage of G. Eric Sachers to Miss Wilhelmina Otey Walker of Arlington, N. J., and Edward J. Nelson to Miss Carolyn Pollard of Shelton, N. J. Congratulations are extended to these couples.

Our former secretary, S. S. Keeney of New York Alpha, has left the fold and so-journed to Miami, Florida. Brother Keeney believes that the climate and the business opportunities for a young man in Miami are beyond a doubt the greatest that he has ever seen. Syme called Miami the all-year playground of America. He recently called upon us in New York, having returned for a brief trip to wind up his affairs in New York. We had a special luncheon in his honor, and as a former Y. M. C. A. secretary, Syme certainly lived up to their standards. He had the greatest line of stories we have heard in some time. He believes that if it was not for the solid moral foundation which he received in his youth, there would be no telling what might have happened to him in Miami. He likes Miami so well that he has sold his house in Ridgewood and is moving his whole family down there. He is manager of the Baldwin Mortgage Company, having complete charge of the mail order business of that company.

W. H. Buckhagen of Michigan Alpha, who is a salesman for the Hanovia Chemical & Mfg. Co. of Newark, N. J., passed through this city recently in a new Hupmobile sedan bound for the "wide open" spaces" of western and central Canada. Buckhagen sells an electric ray machine used by physicians, and it is authentically reported that every hamlet in his territory is or will shortly be well supplied with the article he sells. No prospect can resist his glowing and enthusiastic onslaught.

At the last meeting of the chapter it was decided that the alumni chapter in New York City act as an employment agency for the brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon who are seeking employment. The office and facilities of the secretary will be at the disposal of any brothers seeking employment or any brothers who are seeking men. The New York alumni believe that they can be of great assistance to brothers in this way and would appreciate the co-operation of the whole fraternity in this matter.

Our first monthly meeting will be held at the new fraternity clubhouse at 22 East 38th Street, New York City, on Thursday evening, September 18th at 6:30 p. m. This is our first appearance in this club building, and we hope to make it a record breaker for attendance and entertainment. This will be our regular monthly meeting place, providing the arrangements which the secretary has made proves satisfactory to the brothers. The New York City Alumni chapter meets the third Tuesday in each month from September to and including May of each year, and now that we have a regular meeting place there will be no excuses for the brothers not knowing where the monthly meeting is to be held. While we have not secured a room which we can call all our own, we have secured a room which is very private, and I have been assured by the management that the freedom of the room in which we shall hold our meeting will be all that we desire.

Our regular Wednesday noon luncheon will be hereafter held at Miller's restaurant, 115 Nassau Street, at 12:30 p. m.

—W. O. Perry.

OMAHA ALUMNI CHAPTER

A "special" meeting at the home of W. J. Krug the last of June, a picnic at King's Lake shortly after, a dinner dance at the Happy Hollow Club July 22nd and a dinner dance at the Omaha Field Club the first week in September interrupted the monotony of an otherwise dull summer when it is not supposed that organizations will keep alive. The fall program of activity will start the last of September with a banquet in the new Elk's Club just completed.

Vacations have been the chief topic of conversation since the return of the various members. For instance, Fred Hellner insists that he never had such a vacation but that is understood when it is recalled that he started his vacation a day or so after having had the words said over him that forevermore seal his liberty. William Jennings Krug, more descriptively known as "Pork" Krug, devised a new form of vacation by touring the state and playing over the golf course of every town through which he passed having a golf course. That's a suggestion for the future.

Loren L. Ewing having bended to the matrimonial yoke foreswore a vacation and stayed through the summer at the all-year-around Tech High School where he is an instructor. Ye secretary and family took three weeks in Chicago for their diversion.

M. G. Van Scoy is now located with the Cudahy Packing Company in Omaha engaged in the design and planning of their new buildings. In the Western Bell Telephone Company we find J. L. Woodward, W. C. Wencil and J. Van Sickle.

Dr. J. F. Purney is still extracting teeth as well as committing other crimes upon friendly mouths and has been given the much sought honor of president of the Omaha chapter of the Nebraska State Dental Society. Dr. J. W. Koutsky is practicing medicine in partnership with his father but is scheduled to start serving as one of the county physicians starting the first of next January. Dr. Eugene Slattery, dentist and golf champion of Lincoln and runner-up in Omaha, is now located with offices in Aquila Court Building.

Walter R. Johnson, republican nominee for the state legislature who holds a policy insuring him the office, done gone and got himself married in June last, much to the consternation of the chapter who had felt secure in the fact that Walter, together with certain others whom it is not necessary to mention, were lady-proof. Both as a husband and as a legislator we prophesy a future for this lawyer-member.

—Leo R. Lowry.

BALTIMORE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

IN 1917 an Alumni Association was organized in Baltimore and had regular meetings and luncheons for about a year when a halt was called by the war. The members were scattered to the four winds and the organization was completely broken up.

No attempt was made to reorganize until 1922 when two or three of the old members together with a recent graduate decided to try again. All the active chapters were written to asking for names of brothers who were known to be in Baltimore. About ten answered the letter and two or three names were given us. About fifteen men were rounded up who promised to actively support an alumni association.

It was decided to hold bi-weekly dinners with occasional ladies' nights. Not more than ten men responded but we could depend on these ten for fairly regular attendance. The ladies' nights were enjoyable affairs. Some form of entertainment was provided for each of these occasions and dancing was always in order.

The attendance began to drop off towards summer and it was decided to change from dinner meetings to luncheons, so the bunch now meets on the first Thursday of every month at one o'clock at the Engineers' Club. We are always glad to see visiting brothers whenever they are in town.

R. W. Proctor, Virginia Zeta, is sales manager of Black and Decker, and has spread the fame of this firm throughout the country through its electric hand drills. "Doc" is full of pep and keeps his salesmen on their toes through competition between the various branches around the country. "Doc" is secretary of the Alumni Association.

F. W. Proctor, Virginia Zeta, is an able assistant to his brother, both in the firm and in the work of the association.

F. Stanley Porter, Virginia Epsilon, is a rising lawyer in the firm of Mullikin and Porter and the writer has had occasion to send brothers who are in "distress" to him for legal advice. Stan is a golf enthusiast and when he and "Josh" Drewry get together at luncheon it is impossible to get them to discuss anything other than their respective games.

Ernest T. (Josh) Drewry, when not playing or talking golf, spends his time managing the top and upholstering department of R. W. Norris, the largest automotive jobbers in town. If his listeners are not interested in golf, "Josh" always has a line of rare stories on top. Drewry is also a Virginia Zeta alumnus.

Parlett L. Davis, otherwise known as "Bill" or "P-L" is the big end of the contracting firm of DeCou and Davis. He is making a reputation by the class of work he turns out. The writer knows from experience that this is so as "P-L" built the writer's house several years ago and it is still standing. "P-L" hails from Cornell and is, among other things, the writer's brother-in-law.

Victor C. Smith, New Hampshire Alpha, is district manager for the J. G. Wilson Corporation, manufacturers of steel rolling doors, etc. Just at present he is very much interested in the arrival of Victor, Jr., who was born on April 3rd.

William R. Triggs Delaware Alpha, is selling Koering mixers and other contractor's machinery for Thos. M. Brown, also of Delaware Alpha (honorary), and both are much interested in the Alumni Association. "Terry" is all puffed up over the arrival of Lydia Williams Triggs on July 14th.

Charles E. Mitchell, Penna. Delta, '10, is assistant sales manager and engineer of the Alexander Milburn Co., manufacturers of oxy-acetylene welding equipment and is president of the Alumni Association.

—Charles E. Mitchell.

LINCOLN ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

SUMMER usually puts a quietus on alumni activity in Lincoln but with the coming of fall the Lincoln Alumni Association, wives and all, will busy themselves with periodical meetings. The chapter house in Lincoln is the seat of many an alumni frolic and a general headquarters for alumni who desire to get together.

Vernon D. Andrews has stepped into greater responsibilities with the merger of the Bank of College View with the Farmers State Bank of College View of which Andrews was connected. He becomes the president of the new combination. College View is one of the suburbs of Lincoln and it is thus able for Andrews to serve as treasurer of the association and offer his bank as a depository for its funds.

Ralph L. Thiesen has just recently returned from a trip to Colorado where he took his vacation. His wife and young daughter, Dorothy Jean, had preceded him to Colorado and spent all of the hot months of summer there visiting her parents in Denver. Thiesen is acting district manager of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company in the Lincoln, Nebraska, district. It is rumored that a considerable advance is in store for him shortly.

Lon Graf, who, as coach of the Peru State Normal School last fall copped the state football conference championship, has just returned from the summer coaching school conducted by Knute Rochne, coach of the noted Notre Dame football team. Graf will return to Peru and put to work some of the new ideas got from the famous Rochne. To date he has made a great success of his work at Peru.

Several other affiliates with this organization have drifted elsewhere to take up coaching. Bob Russell, Nebraska three-letter man and all around star, has become the coach of York College at York, Nebr., where he takes over a difficult job and an even more difficult schedule. York for many years has been none too successful and has at last decided to whip up its athletics.

Wilbur P. Riddlesbarger has gone to O'Neill, Nebr., to coach the high school athletics in that place and serve as principal. The two Fairchilds, Claire and Claude, are to coach in Simla, Colo., and Albion, Nebr., respectively this coming year. Harold Bedell is another of this organization who is teaching this year but in college work, he having gone to the State University of Iowa as an instructor in chemistry.

In Memoriam

ENOCH N. HOLSTROM

Enoch Nathaniel Holstrom of New York Beta of Sigma Phi Epsilon died at St. Luke's hospital in Chicago, Ill., on March 6th, after an illness of several months.

He was born on March 15, 1891, in St. Paul, Minnesota, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Holstrom. After graduating from the Mechanics Arts High School, he entered Cornell in 1912 and graduated in 1916 with the degree of M. E. While an active member of Sigma Phi Epsilon, Brother Holstrom took an active part in chapter activities and became chapter secretary in his junior year.

After leaving the university, he went with the Wagner Electric Company in St. Louis, Mo., and later was transferred to New York. In 1917 he went to France as a second lieutenant with the Eleventh Engineers and was soon promoted to a first lieutenantcy.

At the Battle of Cambrai, Holstrom directed the construction of rail lines for the transportation of tanks to the front. This he did with such speed that he received a letter of commendation from General Pershing. During that battle, two hundred of his men were cut off from their detachment by a barrage, but he led them to safety and for this act of heroism was made a captain.

After his return from France, Brother Holstrom was associated with the Twin City Rapid Transit Company in St. Paul and early in 1923 went to Chicago. In October, 1921, he was married to Miss Berenice Towle of St. Paul, who survives him together with his mother and two brothers, Harry L. Holstrom, Cornell, '17, of St. Paul, and Benjamin Holstrom, Cornell, '21, of Seattle, Washington, besides two sisters, the Misses Ruth and Betty Holstrom of St. Paul.

NORMAN R. STRICKLAND

Norman R. Strickland, Washington Beta, while canoeing on Lake Washington, Seattle, Washington, on the evening of June 9th was, together with a girl companion, drowned when their canoe capsized sometime between 8:30 and 11:30 in the evening.

The first knowledge of the tragedy was had when an overturned canoe was found in the canal leading out of the lake. Investigation started at the boat house indicated that Brother Strickland had chartered the canoe and his brother, Rex Strickland, and the Washington Beta chapter were notified in the morning. In the meantime the harbor department started dragging the lake to recover the bodies in which they were unsuccessful. As soon as notified the entire Washington Beta chapter took up the search of the lake. The finding of Brother Strickland's coat and hat and a girl's vanity case early confirmed the fear that Brother Strickland was the one drowned.

The body of the girl was found floating in the lake about 9:30 in the morning but Strickland's body could not be located. Every foot of the lake was covered time after time by the chapter as well as the harbor department, without result. Members of the chapter borrowed the College of Fisheries' motor boat and improvising a drag combed the lake from end to end. The harbor department sent down divers where the canoe had evidently capsized but nothing was found.

The day past and others followed. School ended and the chapter was disbanded with the thought that Strickland's body was gone never to be recovered but on June 19th the body was found by a tug boat floating near the place where the canoe was overturned. The next day funeral services were held in the University Undertaking Parlors chapel where the chapter took complete charge. The casket was draped with the fraternity banner and adorned with a large heart of American Beauty roses and violets with the Greek letters S. P. E. in the center. A profusion of flowers, the gifts of the fraternity and other friends, decorated the chapel. The following morning Rex Strickland started with the remains on the long journey to their home in North Carolina. The floral heart was packed in ice and accompanied the body on its return that it might continue into the grave—an emblem of an institution he loved so well.

Normal Strickland had just graduated from Washington University and had planned to return for work in the medical college this fall. Bright and an excellent student despite the time devoted of necessity to supporting himself in college, he had a splendid future before him. His kindness and sunny disposition captivated all who came to know him and his memory will remain within the chapter so long as those who knew him are there. Possessed of the finest of ideals, earnest, sincere, he represented the highest type of manhood and his loss is one that the fraternity can so ill afford. There is a void in the hearts of those who were his associates but there lingers an ineffacable memory of him that time will not destroy.

WEAR YOUR FRATERNITY BADGE

SYMBOLS OF FRIENDSHIP

To express Friendship we search for gifts with special meaning. Sentiment is simple, going from one heart to another, and the gift which bears it, costing little or much, must express a sympathetic undertaking of the tastes of the friend who receives it.

For Fraternity men and women what more expressive gift could be chosen than some article bearing the fraternal insignia. This would carry an even deeper significance than Friendship.

Such gifts of individuality may be had from the L. C. Balfour Company and are illustrated in their current Blue Book.
